Only One Law
Watch Busy Russia
How Far, for Hitler?
A Man Sanctuary

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

Conditions that exist in Germany are well described in but ten words from a speech by Goering, Prussian prime minister:

"The law and the will of the Feuhrer (Hitler) are one."

The late brilliant lawyer, Joseph H. Choate, made a statement in court, and the judge said:

"That is not the law, Mr. Choate."

Mr. Choate tactfully replied: "It was, until your honor spoke."

In Germany the law is fixed after Hitler has spoken.

It is wise to keep track of what is going on in Russia. Not bound by tradition, paying no attention to the word "impossible," Russia is doing something new all the time, and we ought to know about it.

For transportation in the vast regions of Russia where railroads and bridges are unknown, a seaplane has been built 30 feet long, 10 feet wide, with 450 horsepower, that will carry freight or 25 passengers over land and water, and go 500 miles without taking on fuel. Wheels, operated on land and air, or water propeller, whichever proves the most efficient, will move the craft on the water.

One thing helps in revolution, as France discovered when Europe's "great soldiers" were powerless against men in stovepipe hats.

Revolution wipes out old ideas and starts new thinking. We don't want it here, but we should watch carefully those that are trying it. We might learn something.

Simon and Schuster's new book, "Hitler Over Europe," makes it a little too easy for Hitler, a little too bad for the rest of Europe. But if European statesmen permit another war, now that poison gas, high explosives and the airplane are here, many things will be learned in a short time, as when gangsters "shoot it out" at close range.

German troops were unable to reach Paris in four years. German airplanes will reach Paris in the next war in two hours, and within six hours after the start of the war cities will be crumbling and whole populations gasping for breath, on both sides.

"Hitler Over Europe" sees Germany, the empire, spreading "from the Atlantic to the Suez Canal," taking France in its stride, subjugating Russia, to use her 160,000,000 people as slaves.

That might come with a great military genius. Napoleon, Genghis Khan and others almost did it, riding on horseback, without airplanes.

What interests this country is the statement that "the whole of Germany is today one vast airplane factory."

Germany's air industry could turn out two thousand planes every four weeks. If human beings ever see another world war they will see a new kind and a short one, almost as short as when our Mr. Dillinger says, "Stick them up!"

George Bernard Shaw, borrowing from the "bird sanctuaries," suggests that the whole world be made "a sanctuary for human beings," with "no shooting allowed."

There have been in the past sanctuaries where even the worst criminal was safe. If a fleeing criminal reached a church or temple and placed his hand on the altar, no law could touch or drag him from his sanctuary.

But Shaw's "world-wide sanctuary for human beings" is too optimistic, considering that killing his fellow man has always been man's chief sport and occupation, beginning with heavy clubs in primitive days, winding up with poison gas in our "civilized" era.

However, this nation, if it chose, could establish a "sanctuary" for AMERICAN human beings on this North American continent.

Continuation of friendship now existing among the American nations, and for the United States such an air fleet, submarine fleet, modern poison gases

MAYOR CALLS ORDER FOR SLASH FAR TOO RIGID

Action of Dowling Is Greeted by Storm of Protests

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield today vetoed the order of John C. L. Dowling, executive director of the welfare department, which called for a 20 per cent reduction in Mother's Aid allowance.

Mayor Mansfield in vetoing the Director Dowling's reduction order said:

"It may be that a 20 per cent cut is justified in some cases and not in others. This order treats all cases alike and seems to me too rigid and inflexible.

"Every worthy person must receive adequate aid and the affect of this order may be to reduce the amount paid to many worthy mothers' below the point at which they and their families can bubsist."

STORM OF PROTEST

The chief executive sent word immediately to Dowling's office that he declined to approve the order.

MAD DOG SLAIN IN CAMBRIDGE

The entire East Cambridge district was thrown into an uproar today when a mad dog ran wild.

Families barricaded themselves behind locked doors as the animal, a full-grown Airedale, raced through the district, terrorizing men, women and children, before it was killed.

Lieut. Robert J. Douglass, Jr., Sergt. John R. King and Patrolman Peter Lyons, of the East Cambridge division, raced to the scene in a cruising car.

As they arrived, the dog broke through a screen door and raced into the street and several hundred persons drawn to the scene scattered to safety in stores and homes.

The three officers gave chase and with a heavy chain, Douglass finally lassoed the dog.

Two shots from Lyon's pistol ended its life. The body will be exained for traces of rabies.

San Francisco Strike Halts Food Supply

By International News Service

San Francisco, July 14—Like a roaring avalanche, a general strike apparently was descending today on the populous San Francisco Bay region with the likelihood of spilling over to the other great ports of the Pacific Coast.

Union labor was applying its fiercest weapon to force employers of maritime workers—23,000 of whom have tied up coast shipping for 66 days—to come to terms with the longshoremen's and seamen's unions, with San Francisco and neighborhood cities as the main battleground.

The strike tally today stood: On strike—longshoremen and seamen affiliates in San Francisco, Oakland, Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles and San Diego, 23,000 men; 11 non-marine unions in San Francisco and cities on the eastern shore of the bay, 8000; striking today—six non-marine unions in the San Francisco Bay area, 5000.

200 UNIONS READY

And only awaiting the word from their delegations were more than 200 other unions in San Francisco and Oakland, with memberships of over 10,000 men, ready to join the walkout—to clamp a terrifying general strike on 1,500,000 people.

The decision on a general strike in the San Francisco area was to be reached today at a conclave of 5 delegates from each union, chosen last night when the "strategy committees" of labor councils

HITLER IS AGAIN GERMAN BOSS

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Copyright, 1934, International News Service

Berlin, July 14 (INS)—Adolf Hitler today is once more the boss of Germany.

Most of Germany's 65,000,000 citizens heard his speech last night. But today they were reading it all over again, and its cleverness and its drama have brought Hitler's prestige again almost to the level of that stage of national enthusiasm which accompanied his ascension to power.

WHITE FACED CROWDS

If he has lost some hundreds of thousands, or even a million, storm troopers, he has gained, perhaps, at least as many supporters among those who hated the storm troopers.

Two sets of considerations show the extent of Hitler's political genius. First, it is necessary to

GAG FOUND IN HUNT; SEEK BOSTON CLUE

Two blood-stained handkerchiefs and a ransom note today gave authorities new hope that the mystery surrounding the disappearance of 21-month-old Bobby Connor from his home in fashionable Hartsdale, N. Y., may soon be pierced.

The handkerchiefs were found this morning near the little boy's home by a newspaper photographer, who turned them over to the Greenburgh, N. Y., police. One looked as though it might have been used as a gag.

The other—obviously a man's—had the initial "D" embroidered in one corner. Apparently both had been dropped only recently.

Federal Department of Justice men assigned to the case meanwhile admitted that they had intercepted a registered letter, mailed from New York and addressed to the baby's parents.

The note asked for $50 in $1 bills. According to the investigators, it may be the work of a crank. They refused to say whether it contained any mention of the missing, curly-haired youngster.

But, while these clues were not being overlooked, it was freely stated that the authorities are most confidently looking toward Boston as the place where he first real trace of Bobby's whereabouts will be found.

Greater Boston police renewed their activities in the case, apparently convinced that if a ransom demand were made it would come—and soon—to the child's grandfather, Charles P. Connor, 80 years old, of Arlington, retired Boston clothing merchant.

Failure of posses to find any trace of the missing child after almost two days of searching, and the collapse of two major clues in the case with the exoneration of a woman driver and a pedlar, gave strength to the theory that the ebduction was a ransom kidnaping or the deed of an eccentric.

Records of other professional kidnapings indicate that the criminals will make their demand for

DAD'S BRINGING GIRL HOME

Pretty 16-year-old girl—Loretta Oliver, of Perkins street, Somerville—was a passenger aboard the Central Railroad of New Jersey coal barge Number 1, when it pulled into its berth today.

To Loretta's surprise she found a reception committee awaiting her. Several policemen and her father, John Oliver. There was a motorcycle there, too. The father had traveled from Somerville by motorcycle.

The motorcycle had an extra seat, just behind the driver's place. Loretta was placed on it. A rope was wrapped securely around her waist and tied to the driver's seat. Her dad cranked the machine. Away it chugged.

The police explained that Miss Oliver, a second year student in Somerville high school, had a yearning to see the world, so she talked the wife of the captain of the coal barge into permitting her to ride on the craft.

BLOOD-STAINED HANDKERCHIEF GAG FOUND IN KIDNAP HUNT

CRANK SENDS RANSOM NOTE TO BABY'S PARENTS

cash within the next 24 or 48 hours. For that reason postal inspectors here were ordered to participate in the case in an effort to aid cordons of police that have been thrown about the homes of Maurice A. Clancy, at 53 Irving street, Arlington, with whom Bobby's grandfather lives, and of Frank Connor, an uncle of the baby, who lives at 34 Mayfield street, Dorchester.

Father Expects Big Developments Today

Confirmation that the search for clues is becoming increasingly important in Boston also came today from Clarence R. McKane, chief of the Department of Justice agents in this area. At the federal building he said:

"We certainly are interested in this case. I have assigned several men to it."

Following the strict procedure of his department, he refused to divulge any further details about his participation in the hunt.

Neither the elder Connor nor his son was at home today. Nor could the latter be found at his place of business at 140 Harrison avenue. It was learned, however, that he had received a telegram from his brother—the father of the missing boy—last night.

Arlington Man May Never Have Seen Baby

The elder Connor left his home about 8:30 this morning as usual, but he failed to make his appearance at the office, 86 Essex street, where he has maintained desk space since his retirement.

A maid at the Arlington home said that she believed he had never seen his missing grandson. The boy's father, she said, has not visited in Arlington for eight or nine years, and the grandfather has been prevented from traveling during the last two years by illness.

Intense activity also marked the work of the authorities in Hartsdale today. The child's father indicated that there might be an important development in the case soon. He said:

"I don't think there's anything to worry about. Things will soon be all right."

This remark was interpreted as confirmation that a ransom demand already had been served on the family in a special delivery letter. Local, state and federal au- [illegible] however, continued to [illegible]

Theory [illegible]ws Search

Frank X. Fay, in charge of the Department of Justice agents assigned to the case and famed for his part in the Lindbergh baby hunt, went so far as to say that no actual proof of a kidnaping had been found. Other officials confirmed his report of a complete lack of clues since the disappearance of little Bobby at 6 p. m. Thursday evening.

All, however, admitted that they are working on the kidnaping theory. Fay took personal charge of the investigation at the request of Hartsdale authorities and announced that he would make his headquarters in the Connor home.

Meanwhile, a woman canvasser, sought after a neighbor told the police he saw her drive past the curly-haired youngster's home about the time of his disappearance, was found in a nearby Westchester town last night and exonerated.

A pedlar, answering the description of the eccentric who canvassed smart Hartsdale on Thursday, was picked up at Seabright, N. J., about the same time. He, too, was released after being questioned.

The man, who identified himself as John Leddy, 47, of Newark, convinced the police that he had been working elsewhere Thursday afternoon and that his connection with the case was a matter of mistaken identity.

U. S. Agent Prepares For Long Search

Fay early today ordered a secret telephone line installed in the Connor home, and, apparently convinced that it may take longer to solve the mystery than local au- [illegible] believe, began severing [illegible] ton in other [illegible] n. [illegible] ed nothing as [illegible] aping, but we will proce[illegible] t theory until other evidence is forthcoming."

Meanwhile, the police of Greenburgh, N. Y., where the woman driver was questioned, advanced the theory that the little boy might have been the victim of a hit-and-run driver who—panic stricken—fled with the body rather than face arrest.

Police Chief Philip McQuillan ordered the theory investigated.

Father Convinced He Is Alive; Has No Money

Charles H. Connor, Yale and Exeter alumnus and father of the missing child, maintained a vigil over the telephone at his home, awaiting word from the kidnapers—if any.

Father Sure Bobby Is Alive and Well

As to whether he would pay a ransom, he said:

"I don't know where I'd get it. I'm just a civil engineer working for a small salary."

With the waning hope of a distraught father, as state troopers, boy scouts and volunteers returned empty-handed from their search, he said:

"One thing seems certain. My son is not dead. I am satisfied that he is alive, in the hands of some one who kidnaped him."

The child's mother is at the Bridgeport, Conn., home of her mother, Mrs. R. M. Murphy, with her three other children—Claire, 9, Richard, 7, and Joan, 4.

A bloodhound owned by R. H. Kress, 10-cent store magnate, of Ossining, led a posse of more than 1000 state troopers, citizens and boy scouts to a sand pile near the Connor home. But there the animal lost the scent. Repeatedly the dog was brought back to the Connor lawn for a new start. Each time he led the searchers to the sand pile. He was unable, however, to go any further

Mother Grieving, Still Hopeful of Safety

The boy's mother tried to hide her despair as she said:

"I have never doubted for a minute Bobby will be found. The police have done so much, I must continue to hope.

"It's hard to believe anyone would kidnap Bobby. I thought at first that he was sleeping somewhere. Children frequently wander away and fall asleep. But now I don't know what to think."

Police pointed out that kidnapers might have assumed that Connor is wealthy because of his residence in the exclusive suburb. The Connor home abuts the estate of Felix Warburg. Charles A. Stoneham, Dudley Field Malone and Henry Gaisman also live in the fashionable city.

Mrs. Connor's mother, Mrs. Richard L. Murphy, is the widow of a former police commissioner of Bridgeport.

Ponzi Refused Bail by Ford

Charles Ponzi remained in the custody of the immigration officials today following the refusal of United States District Attorney Francis J. W. Ford to allow him to be admitted to bail pending action by Judge Elisha H. Brewster of the United States District Court on Ponzi's petition for release on a writ of habeas corpus.

Ponzi, who is being held by immigration officials for deportation to Italy, will have to remain in their custody until next Tuesday when Judge Brewster is scheduled to hear his petition.

Douglas, Isle of Man, July 14 (AP)—Kaye Don, British motor car and motor boat racer, insisted today under cross examination at his trial for manslaughter, that he thought that he showed no carelessness during the test run which resulted in a crash and the death of his mechanic, Francis Taylor.

During a series of questions directed at Don the attorney general mentioned that "you had no headlights" no horn, no driving license for the Isle of Man and no insurance."

Mankind Races for Life, Says Mather

Civilization is committed to a race between education and extinction, Professor Kirtley F. Mather, director of Harvard University summer school warned today. Methods of coercion, calling in police, increasing diameter of guns, enlarging navy and air forces, and passing laws, have failed, he asserted, adding:

"There is at least the hope that education may accomplish what coercion has failed to achieve."

She told of the party preceding Miss Jeppesen's death, and testified she was with Hickman in his apartment at the hour the state contends the Utah girl was attacked.

Marshall Neilan, director of the film, today wired Samuel Riddle, Kentucky turf-man, to see if he will permit the champion to be shipped across the country to Hollywood to act before a motion picture camera.

POLICE ACT ON BORDEN DEATH

Police officials at aheadquarters conference today decided to go into Roxbury court Monday to ascertain if the court will issue a complaint in the death of George Borden, Roxbury Negro janitor, who was shot by a motor vehicle inspector.

Borden died in City Hospital last night, five days after being wounded in a chase by Motor Vehicle Inspector Everett Gardner.

It is understood representatives of Boston Negro organizations will attend the court session.

At a hearing early this week, Judge Hayden refused to issue any complaint against Gardner, but did issue one charging Borden with attacking a policeman who was assisting Gardner in the chase.

All charges against Borden were wiped out by his death.

Police are willing that District Attorney Foley take up the case if he wishes, but if does not act before Monday they will go to court, as announced by Acting Superintendent James McDevitt, after a conference with Captains Kavanagh and Daley.

The crowds which awaited his passage through the streets of Berlin were white-faced with nervous strain. Why?

CALLED "LAST HOPE"

Germany had actually staked its last cent on Hitler. He represented Germany's last hope and because of the events of June 30 and thereafter, even Hitler had bcome a doubt. He had killed scores of his old friends and said they were traitors.

But were they?

He had laid bare the murderous differences within the Nazi party. Again he had introduced executions without trial as a political instrument.

He had threatened the nation into a paralyzed anxiety. The Germans had voted overwhelmingly for Hitler but yesterday afternoon it was doubtful whether Hitler would have gotten a bare majority if the nation had been given an opportunity to vote.

WAVES OF RELIEF

Today all that is changed. It is hard to convey to the foreign public what waves of relief went over Germany as the Germans heard last night and read Hitler's convincing account of Captain Ernst Roehm's revolt.

One of the problems Hitler must now decide is whether he shall acquiesce in the "encirclement" or fight against it. There were indications he would gird his loins for the battle.

Germany has been asked to join in an "Eastern Locarno," which is designed to preserve the territorial status quo in Eastern Europe and serve as a guarantee of peace. She has been asked to join with Russia, Czecho-Slovakia and the Baltic states in a pact of mutual security.

To accept the idea of theh "Eastern Locarno" Germany would have to surrender all thought of regaining any of the territory she lost in the East as a result of the World War and accept as permanent her present eastern frontiers. To a nation that has for more than a decade dreamed of getting back her lost lands this may be regarded as too great a sacrifice.

Big Highlights in Hitler's Speech

By Associated Press

Berlin, July 14—Highlights from Chancellor Adolf Hitler's speech:

"Only a merciless bloody stroke could perhaps smother the spreading revolt. Better that a hundred mutineers, conspirators and plotters perish than that ten thousand harmless storm troop men, ten thousand equally harmless citizens on the other side, should pour out their blood."

* * *

"If some one questions me why we did not invoke an ordinary court to deal with the men I can only tell him:

"In this hour I was responsible for the fate of the German nation; thereby the supreme court of the German people during thes e24 hours consisted of myself."

* * *

"I issued the order to shoot those mainly guilty of this treason and I issued the further order to burn out down to the raw flesh the boils of our domestic well-poisoning and the poisoning of foreign countries."

* * *

"Everyone is to know, for all future times that if he raises his hand for attack against the state, certain death will be his."

* * *

* * *

"I pity the wives and children of the executed men, but I believe that sufferings inflicted upon them through the fault of their men is only a tiny fraction of the woe that would have befallen tens of thousands of German women."

* * *

"However heavy the sacrifices may be they have not been in vain."

* * *

"In a few weeks' time Brown Shirts will again dominate the streets of German towns and make clear to all that the National Socialistic Germany has regained a stronger life by overcoming a severe time of stress."

* * *

"I am ready before history to take the responsibility for 24 hours of the bitterest decision of my life, during which fate has again taught me in anxious worry, with every thought of mine to cling to the dearest thing we possess in this world: The German people and the German Reich."

Speech Disappoints European Capitals

By Associated Press

Disappointment at Chancellor Hitler's failure to discuss German foreign policy was the general reaction to his speech today in European capitals.

Official comment was withheld, in some instances, until the text could be carefully studied.

Nationalist newspapers in Paris interpreted Hitler's silence on foreign affairs as an indication he is in no hurry to study the French proposal of an Eastern Locarno pact.

The commentator of the newspaper Figaro said the speech "will disappoint both Germany and Europe" and that it was full of contradictions.

London's Daily Mail saw as an indication the German army was restive under Hitler's statement that President Von Hindenburg had reconciled the Reichswehr to the present state of affairs.

Importance also was placed upon the Chancellor's assertion that the storm troops forces had been increased against his orders.

The Laborite Herald said Hitler "has revealed himself the obedient servant of the old gang, ready at any minute to kill anybody in its behalf, and the Reichstag enthusiastically followed the leader."

Many Italian quarters expressed disappointment because foreign policy was not discussed.

Austrian Nazi Is Shot to Death

By Associated Press

Vienna, July 14—A squad of men entered the apartment of Cornelius Zimmer, alleged Naz[illegible] stood him up against a wall and shot him to death today.

The killing immediately aroused conjecture among the general public as to whether this was the beginnings of ruthless vigilante actions against Nazis.

VATICAN WAITS HITLER TEXT

By International News Service

Vatican City, July 14—Amazement was expressed in Vatican circles today that Chancellor Hitler's speech, at least as supplied by news agencies, contained no explanation or allusion to the slaying of members of the Catholic Action group in Germany.

It was learned that Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ, which has been vigorous in its condemnation of these executions, is awaiting arrival of the full text of the speech before making any comment.

Hayes Assails Peace Advocates

Menominee, Mich., July 14 (US)—Thundering a warning against "strange tenets and doctrines," Edward A. Hayes, national commander of the American Legion, at a convention here called on the American people to take a stand against forces he sees as threatening the life of the nation.

Hayes assailed student movements in various colleges which advocate non-assistance and non-participation in any future war.

RABBIT LURES GIRL TO DEATH

By Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 14—A little white rabbit lured eight-year-old Elaine Watson to a horrible death in the basement of the home of F. W. Ruske, father of three children.

Police Lieutenant Otto Frederick said today Ruske admitted killing the child with a whiskey bottle but denied attacking her. The girl had been criminally attacked, Dr. Sherman Leland, autopsy surgeon, said.

The little body was found under rubbish, while Ruske was in jail on a drunk and disorderly charge preferred by his wife.

The child had gone into the basement Thursday to hunt for her missing pet rabbit. Police quoted Ruske as saying:

"I had already killed the rabbit, so I beat the girl to death with a bottle."

Previously Ruske had helped her hunt for the rabbit, whose skinned body lay in the cellar. His family was hungry, and he had no money, he said.

ARRESTS NEAR IN AYER RUM SCANDAL

Listen, World! by ELSIE ROBINSON

So they're telling you, youngster, that the good old days were better than these, are they?

Don't you believe them! I'm 51. I was born in those good old days; worked my way through them. And like them fine. But you can take it from me, they weren't better than these days you're seeing now.

Elsie Robinson

Yes, it's true, things were quieter, slower. Folks took their time, working and enjoying life. There wasn't as much rush, or nearly as much worry for a few. But for the great majority, life was apt to be a grim and grimey affair.

If things wern't as cluttered, neither were they as convenient. If folks took more time, they also did less with it.

* * *

Delightful to hear about the quiet little rose-covered cottages of yester-year! But every time I hear one of my old playmates sobbing over that "lost paradise" I want to yell:

"Be your age and stop your kidding! How about the mildew and the germs that went with those lovely rose wreaths . . . the tainted water in ye old oaken bucket . . . The musty smell of those airless parlors? How about the splintery floors and sloshing washtubs that broke Dear Old Mother's back?

"The freezing bedrooms where Aunt Abby and Cousin Silas died so peacefully of pneumonia? A 'lost paradise'—my eye! With consumptives spitting all over the landscape and youngsters dying of rickets through sheer ignorance!"

* * *

And that's just the beginning, youngster. The musty desires, the tainted thoughts, were worse than the horrid, dank little holes they lived in or the scummy filth they drank. If they lived more slowly, they also thought more slowly—with incredible stupidity and, often, callous cruelty.

Children were beaten, as a matter of course, in those good old days. Mothers died in ghastly travail, from filth and neglect. Men broke their hearts drudging twelve hours a day under conditions we wouldn't permit today in a stock yard.

* * *

Life was swell for the few, but hell for the majority.

An old woman used to prowl aimlessly through the back streets of our little town . . . her gray lips whispering, her hollow eyes searching, searching.

Sometimes if she came upon a mound of earth she would give a queer, clucking cry and squat down, fumbling frantically at the ground with thin claws of hands. Then suddenly she would forget what she wanted and wander away again, staring, whispering.

Twenty years before she had lost five babies within a week from diphtheria. Anti-toxine was unknown. One after another she had seen them strangle to death, their little faces purpling, tiny hands fighting for breath. When the last one went, her mind went with it.

* * *

And now we have strikes, riots—restlessness and rebellion everywhere?

Yes, thank God, we have!

People no longer bow their heads and submit to hideous suffering and loss, believing it to be the "will of God."

Today we know that it is the will of God that men should live fearlessly, proudly, happily, in freedom and justice . . . and fight until they can.

I'm telling you, youngster, there's more REAL RIGHTEOUSNESS in one day of this furious modern protest against degradation of mind and body than there was in a hundred years of those "good old days," with their dirt and dreariness and dismal surrender.

* * *

Not, mind you, that I think that 1934 is any paradise, either. We've invented many a menace of which our fathers never dreamed . . . pulled many a boner . . . and managed, with all our improvements, to make life mighty uncomfortable.

But something's happening which never happened before in human history. There's a new conception of "life more abundant" for EVERYONE . . . a new fury against the things that have shackled and scarred. Which, of course, is bound to raise ructions for some time to come.

BUT I'D RATHER DIE FIGHTING IN ONE OF THE RIOTS OF 1934 THAN LIVE FOREVER IN THE STUPID, ROSE-WREATHED STAGNATION I KNEW AS A CHILD.

So don't let them fool you, youngster! These are the days! THANK HEAVEN YOU WERE BORN IN THEM . . . AND GIVE THEM ALL YOU'VE GOT

NINE GUILTY IN SLAYING OF BISHOP

By Universal Service

New York, July 14—All nine of the Armenians charged with the murder last December 24 of Archbishop Leon Tourian were found guilty early this morning by a general sessions jury which had been out with the case for more than 12 hours.

Mateos Leylegian, identified by three witnesses as leader of the band which stabbed the archbishop to death, and Nishan Sarkisian were found guilty of murder in the first degree and face death in the electric chair.

20 YEAR TERMS

Verdicts of first degree manslaughter were returned against the other seven defendants. The penalty for this is from 20 years to life imprisonment.

It was said to be the first time in the history of the state that nine defendants have been found guilty in one criminal case.

The courtroom was cleared of all except those directly concerned with the case as Judge Corrigan pounded his gavel. In a room across the corridor a priest of the slain archbishop's faction could be heard praying.

Then the nine defendants were led solemnly in, each in the custody of a guard. They stood motionless, their swarthy faces expressionless, as the verdict was given.

GUARDS FOR COUNSEL

Then each, through an interpreter, gave his pedigree and was led away.

Fearing rival factions might stage demonstrations, police threw a heavy guard around the building, and the defense lawyers, Thomas I. Sheridan and Joab Banton, each had individual guards.

In finding all nine men guilty, the jury apparently accepted the prosecution's theory that the archbishop's death was the result of a conspiracy engaged in by members of the Tashnag, an Armenian nationalist organization.

The state argued the Tashnag members were infuriated by the aged prelate's opposition to their organization and his partisanship for the present Armenian Soviet republic.

SECRET FORCE ENDS 10-WEEK INVESTIGATION

Ayer, July 14—Revelations, reported to be startling, were expected today with the publication of the report of a secret 10-week investigation into liquor and night club conditions gathered by operatives of the state police.

The reports of these undercover men are said to be the basis on which a number of warrants will be asked in the district court here.

According to the selectmen, management of the Club Woodstock, center of interest in the state and ABC Commission hearing in Boston Thursday is under fire.

Later today, according to the same source, a meeting of selectmen will be held at which the license of the club will be revoked.

CLUB IS JAMMED

Because of the spotlight turned upon the Club Woodstock, the place did a roaring business last night. Sightseers, however, were disappointed in their search for Mrs. Rena Richards and her daughter both of whom were said to have been hostesses to the Groton boys.

William Gilleece, assistant manager of the Woodstock, was the spokesman for the club—also for Mrs. Richards. He said:

"Business is good. We really don't mind all this talk at the State House because we have never broken the laws.

"No minor, from Groton School, or anywhere else, ever bought liquor in the Woodstock. We are staying here and Mrs. Richards will see this thing through. There is more than $12,000 tied up in the place.'

NEEDHAM'S STATEMENT

The furore created centered about charges of Town Counsel Wilson that he himself had seen eight Groton students in the club. He didn't see them drinking, he admitted.

General Daniel Needham, head of the state police, said that the report made to him and forwarded to Wilson contained only findings of fact and included no recommendations. He declared:

"The town officials can take any action they like. We will be glad to cooperate in any way we can."

O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, July 14—I dipped far back into the past a day this week and visited the incubator of these daily trifles. Room 121 of a pin-neat upper West Side hotel is where the quixotic adventure in syndication was launched. It seemed forlorn. A jobless chorus girl in despair had only recently vacated.

O. O. McIntyre

In the corner stood the same spindly desk upon which I typed and mimeographed my screeds to send free, hopefully and vicariously to editors over the land. From this room I had gone forth for countless days wearing the busk of a journalistic doublet high.

To it I had as often returned crushed and dumb to stare out the window in melancholic stupefaction much of the night. The problems were never of the future but the immediate now—how to pay the $12.50 weekly rent, how to make just one editor a disciple, how to avoid confessing failure.

The four walls of Room 121 had witnessed, I hope, the greatest defeats I shall ever know. Tragedies that went beyond tears, blinding, stultifying and breaking out suddenly in ironic laughter. Only the man or woman who has failed utterly time after time understands such a sickness of soul.

* * *

The little bathroom, outside of which I smoked cigarettes furiously while my wife fractured the inviolable rule, "No cooking allowed," seemed in advanced stages of lost grandeur. We only knew years later that J. Wade McGrath, then proprietor,—and may his years be full and fruitful—had penetrated our smoke screen. He knew our secret. Two bewildered country kids trying to make the grade.

* * *

Our New York neighborhood of 20 years ago was to us exciting, vital and thrilling. From our cubby hole we looked out upon rows of the sedate and vanished brownstones. Eddie Grant, the ball player, lived in one. Dave Montgomery, of Montgomery and Stone, in another. Alice Joyce, of the films, in still another. W. C. Fields, the comedian, around the corner. And most important of all, at least to me, "Slivers," the famous clown. "Slivers," who made the world laugh, found the laugh mockery and died by his own hand.

* * *

Through the archway of Room 121, however, was a vista of many pleasant backward memories. Old friends, not seen for years, were suddenly chivied up along the landscapes.

* * *

Room 121 was the scene of tremulous waits for the morning post. Every sun-up yeasted exaggerated promise and quick deflations. Always the manuscript came back or the beseeching letter remained unanswered. That is always but once in the long upgrade. This was a $28 check from Ainslee's. That night we basked in the rakehell glamour of Laloy's—85 cent table d'hote, vin compris. We slipped ten nickels into the mechanical piano slot, chain fashion, winked at a jetsam cocotte and rode triumphantly home in a rubber-tired Victoria as the moon swung high. Still delirious from our julep of freedom, we gave the one-legged newsboy at the subway a quarter for a Morning World. An auspiciously thick headline that a. m. told of the pistoling of the gambler Herman Rosenthal in front of the Metropole. We were in the midst of things. That night we had dined in earshot of a great underworld tragedy.

* * *

The next evening at the hotel's regular "concert," piano and violin, we tried to wear our new authoring honors with offhand casualness. To be one of the crowd as always. Several times we cleared our throat to say, "You must look for a little thing of mine in Ainslee's shortly." The impulse was definitely stilled when someone pointed to a caller across the parlor. Joseph Hergesheimer, no less!

In the great and final transition, which reason insists must be progressive, I wonder in arriving, wherever it is, if we shall not look back on the world we quitted as I upon Room 121. That is with a reverential touch of sentimentality. Also a quickening realization that it has become something long outworn like an old coat, hat or shoe. A place enchanting through time's long telescope but disillusioning in a close-up.

Madden Will Not Wed, He Hasn't Divorce

By Universal Service

Hot Springs, Ark., July 14—Owney Madden, New York beer baron in the days of prohibition did some more denying today—this time that he had obtained a divorce under the easy 90-day Arkansas law.

He denied reports that he had been to Reno, or was intending to go there, for this purpose so that he might be free to marry Miss Agnes Demby, daughter of James B. Demby, former postmaster here.

His new denials appeared to be borne out conclusively by the records. W. D. Parker, chancery clerk, said that no divorce had been granted Madden and that no application had been made for one.

Madden has been the guest at the home of Demby. He declined today to discuss a report that he was on the pay-roll of a coal company in New York now under fire for alleged short weights in its dealings with the city.

SUSPECT HELD AS 'FIREBUG'

Portsmouth, N. H., Jully 14—Police Chief George H. Ducker said Freeman Butler, 41, of this city, had confessed to setting two of a series of fires that have caused nearly $250,000 damage within three months.

Freeman is charged with sounding a false fire alarm. Chief Ducker said Butler confessed setting fire to the garage of Albert Hislop, former mayor of Portsmouth.

FILM REVELS GIRL HIDING

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 14—June DeLong, film extra with "the most beautiful hands in Hollywood," went into seclusion today after telling her story of the alleged "wild party" that led to the Allen-Marsh morals trial.

The trial was adjourned over the week-end and the State's star witness, whose hands have doubled for some of filmdom's leading stars, was "somewhere in Hollywood" under police guard.

Roxbury Youth's Body Sought Near Camp

Deputy sheriffs, members of a nearby CCC camp and fellow vacationists today sought throughout the region of Lake Ossipee, N. H., for the body of Arthur Swerdlove, 21, son of a Roxbury real estate man.

Young Swerdlove, son of Louis Swerdlove of Fayston street, Roxbury, disapeared from Pine Beach Camps at Effington, N. H., where he had been staying on a vacation since last Saturday.

A boat that contained his clothing and the oars to the boat floated ashore Thursday afternoon, a few hours after Swerdlove was missed by companions at the camp. Although no one could be found who saw him in the boat, it was supposed that he went swimming and was drowned.

Sheriff James Welch of Carroll County opened the search for the missing youth and when no immediate trace of him was found secured aid from the CCC camp at Tamworth, 22 miles away.

Lilias Snow to Wed Aviator, 22, Today

Newport, July 14—Boston and Newport society interest centered today on the wedding of Mrs. Lilias Moriarti Snow, 22-year-old Boston society flier, and Pierpont Edward Johnson, 22, also a Boston socialite flier, at the United Congregational Church here this afternoon.

With only intimate friends and members of both families present, the wedding was scheduled at 4 o'clock with the Rev. Ernest L. Wismer officiating.

Lilias M. Snow

Since Mrs. Snow's divorce in Reno last April from Lieutenant Crocker Snow, of Boston, also an aviator, rumors of the society girl's romance with the son of Mrs. Reginald Johnson of 97 Mt. Vernon street, Beacon Hill, were denied by her.

With the filing of marriage intentions here a few days ago, however, announcement of the marriage plans was made known by G. Andrews Moriarti, father of Mrs. Snow, who said his daughter will be unattended but that Reginald F. Johnson, brother of the prospective bridegroom, who is a Williams College alumnus, would be the best man.

The couple filed intentions here in Newport, two days after Mrs. Snow's Reno decree became final. Because of the friendly attitude between Mrs. Snow and her first husband, until her divorce in Reno, repeated reports of a reconciliation were current.

Following the wedding, the couple may fly on their honeymoon, returning here in time for the tennis tournaments and the America Cup races.

Vermont Struck by Severe Storm

Burlington, Vt., July 14—The most severe electrical and rainstorm of the season swept from west to east across Vermont causing damage estimated at several thousand dollars from buildings struck by lightnnig, and washed out bridges and roadways. Nearly four inches of rain fell in the vicinity of Hardwick and other places. Tons of water poured down the narrow valleys to carry away a section of road and a new bridge on the Mackville highway.

Hollywood, July 14—A new and decidedly interesting romance has blossomed in Hollywood within the last few weeks. I only learned of it today when it was whispered in my ear and verified later that Gloria Stuart, Universal film star, and Arthur Sheekman, will be married early in September.

Just in case the name, Sheekman, is a new one to you, let me tell you about him. He is a scenario writer and is now working on "Kid Millions," Eddie Cantor's picture. He was one of the authors of "Roman Scandals" and it was while the lovely blonde Gloria was playing opposite Mr. Cantor that she and her future husband met.

Maude Adams Shuns Cities for 'Sticks'

Ogunquit, Me., July 14—Whatever praise, or lack of it, comes from Broadway critics as they view he return of Maude Adams to the American stage here on Monday, America's Peter Pan is resolved forevermore to play nothing but "the sticks."

The 62-year-old actress, who, like all her ilk, could not resist a comeback chance, revealed this today as she went into another 14-hour rehearsal of a revised Shakespearian comedy.

Maude Adams

Miss Adams, who is so independently wealthy that she can afford a private cottage, three secretaries and a chauffeur, doesn't have to work 14 hours a day—or four, for that matter, but she wants to do it.

The vehicle in which she plans to ride to a renewal of the fame that was a table-topic in every American home a generation or two ago is "Twelfth Night." It is not the "Twelfth Night" of theatergoers, however.

Instead of trying to do a youthful part—and doing it pathetically as is usual with a "comeback"—the greatest actress of her day decided to make the play fit the character she thought she could best portray. So on Monday Viola's part will be subordinated, and Maria with her comedy will be real excuse for it all.

Shakespeare's comedy will be portrayed in two acts instead of five, and Author Walter Pritchard Eaton is responsible.

But Miss Adams isn't going back to Broadway any more. Nor to Boston, Chicago or Baltimore. She's going to play "the sticks."

According to present plans her tour embraces a four-week jaunt of one-night stands in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts.

Gayety Rules as Fleet Takes Cape Cod

Provincetown, July 14—Blaring bands . . . marching feet . . . crowds—and this town belongs to the navy today.

With maneuvers called off for the day, the official greeting of Massachusetts a thing of the past and more than 20,000 visitors in holiday spirit, carnival gayety reigned throughout the day.

WALSH AMONG MISSING

The big event was the morning parade. All who could be spared from the crews of 9000 officers and men on the 32 visiting ships of Uncle Sam's navy stepped smartly through the main streets to acknowledge their welcome.

More speeches of welcome followed at the most colorful luncheon—the official welcoming luncheon—ever staged in historic Town Hall.

U. S. Senator David I. Walsh was missing. Governor Joseph B. Ely was missing. Both announced that official business elsewhere prevented their participation in today's activities.

But former Mayor Curley of Boston attended and rubbed elbows with General Charles H. Cole, the man Curley bitterly fought at the recent Democratic pre-primary in Worcester when the party chose a nominee for governor.

U. S. Senator Marcus Coolidge, Congressman Charles L. Gifford and any number of other celebrities also reviewed the huge parade. All had high praise for the sea forces and all had warm congratulations to the town committee for the welcome afforded them.

For those who didn't attend the official luncheon there were band concerts, yacht racing, boxing exhibitions and other entertainments. Wives and sweethearts "did up the town" with the proud bluejackets.

The afternoon program included a thrilling breeches buoy drill by members of the Race Point coast guard station, a baseball game between teams from thec ruisers Salt Lake City and Chicago, an evening band concert by a 50-piece band at the Town Hall.

Tonight's activities include "Navy Night," arranged for the officers of the visiting craft at the exclusive Beach Club. Others of the fleet had free run of the town.

Ceremonies of pomp and naval splendor greeted the governor and Mrs. Ely and their party when the governor stepped aboard the flagship Indianapolis to pay his respects to Vice-Admiral Campbell. No more dramatic scene has been witnessed on the New England coast in recent years.

GREETED BY ADMIRAL

As the bo'un's mate piped the commanding officer's barge containing the official party as it came alongside the Indianapolis, the groups of staff officers, ship's officers, guard of marines and the ship's band snapped to attention. The officers in full dress were loaded down with gold braid and wore their two-cornered beaver hats topped with gold braid.

The governor, leading his party, stepped over the gangway and passed eight "side boys" as the bos'un's mate's whistle again shrilled to pipe him over the side. The marine guard sounded ruffles and flourishes, then the band crashed out the "Admiral's March."

Captain J. M. Smeallie of the Indianapolis received the governor and presented him to Vice-Admiral Campbell. The fleet chief then escorted the party to his private quarters for tea.

Others of the party were the town selectmen, Frank H. Barnett, Jesse D. Rogers, William J. McCaffrey, and Judge Robert A. Welsh of Second District Barnstable Court, Dr. Daniel H. Hiebert, chairman of the town's fleet welcoming committee, and Paul E. Thurlow, A. K. Kenyon and William J. Fitzgerald of Boston and the governor's two aides.

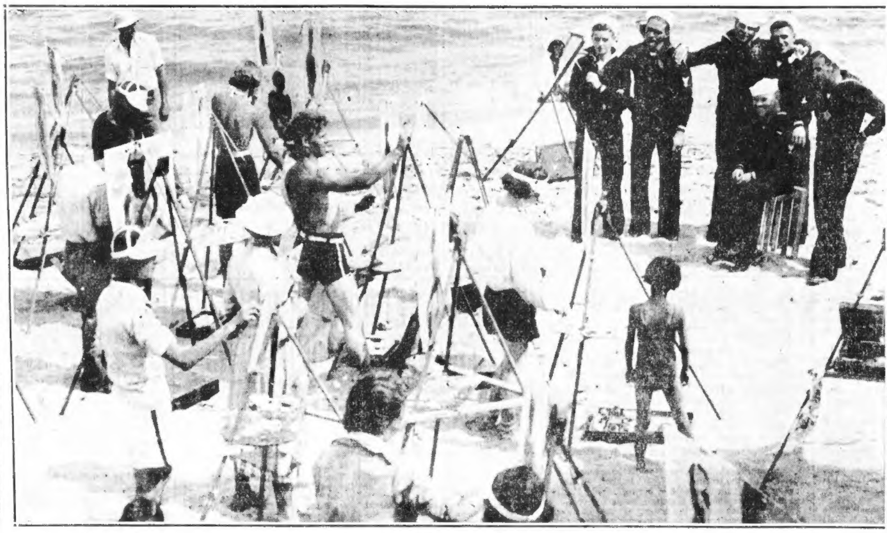
The governor remained aboard 15 minutes, during which he inspected the ship with Vice-Admiral Campbell. The party then returned to the Vice-Admiral's barge, which laid off the Indianapolis, as the three-pounders of the Indianapolis boomed the 19-gun salute. The governor and his guests stood at attention in the bouncing launch while the salute was being given. Governor Ely declared:

"I've never had an experience like this."

SEARCHLIGHTS PLAY

All Cape Cod was treated to a magnificent spectacle last night as the powerful searchlights of the bi ships were turned into the sky for lengthy maneuvers. Great beams of blue light pierced the darkest heavens in cris-cross fashion, presenting a weird and beautiful sight as they illuminated the wide harbor. Thousands lined wharves and beaches to witness the impressive display.

Not all were on revelry bent, however. The local and state police were watching faces keenly as they checked up on reports that underworld members and pickpockets were beginning to invade the town to reap a harvest.



Provincetown is the center of the artists' colony of the Bay State, as the sailors of the fleet soon learned. They were pressed into service as models. Here are a few members of the crews of the U. S. S. Raleigh, U. S. S. Reuben James and the U. S. S. Lawrence doing their poses for the art class of the cape school.

Roosevelt Son Beats Dad in Day's Catch of Fish

Cocos Island, July 14—President Roosevelt had a full day's fishing off this little green dot in the Pacific ocean before him today.

With frigate birds flapping overhead and sharks snapping fish from their lines, the President and his party had a foretaste of the sport yesterday, after the cruiser Houston, which is carrying Mr. Roosevelt to Hawaii, had anchored offshore.

The President yielded to his son, Franklin, Junior, in the initial fishing honors at this uninhabited island, a mere 12 miles in circumference and 500 miles west of the Panama Canal.

A 35-pound one, similar to the fighting barracuda, was the strapping youngster's prize. The President hooked bonita while another son, John, reeled in pompano.

It was a brief twilight excursion, ended by darkness and rainfall.

Fishing craft from the Houston and its escort, the cruiser New Orleans, sped about Cocos Island, but it was the President's launch which had the largest catch. The waters where they made sport were once the rendezvous of pirates.

While the viciousness of the sharks drove all thoughts of swimming from the sailors' minds, the black and white frigate birds gave the cruisers a royal welcome. Descending in large droves, they all but took over the ships.

CAPE CANAL IS RE-OPENED

Traffic in the Cape Cod Canal was resumed today, after ten vessels had been forced to wait almost twelve hours while mechanism, working the railway drawbridge at the Bourne end of the canal was being repaired.

The Eastern Steamship liners, Boston and New York, were forced to round the tip of the Cape, after they had been notified by radio of the blockage in the canal.

The Merchant and Minets line steamship Berkshire, bound for Boston from Philadelphia was also obliged to take the open-ocean route.

Army Chief Orders Full Change in Training

By Universal Service

Washington, July 14—Complete reorganization of army training methods in accordance with present day methods of warfare was called for by General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff.

MacArthur named an army board of five generals and a colonel to make an intensive study of training, especially as it affects the modern branches of aviation and ground mechanized forces.

The chief of staff requested a complete report by October and cautioned the board it must consider every training school of thought impartially.

In his latter instructions, MacArthur said:

"The board is expected to make an exhaustive survey of professional opinion and to explore thoroughly every source of pertinent information. This project constitutes an essential phase in the general program to modernize the army and successful accomplishment of the board's mission will permit orderly, balanced and essential progress in that direction."

MacArthur specifically pointed out that many tactical programs employed in the World War are useless with increased use of planes and tanks.

Simultaneously MacArthur made public the uses to which 10 million dollars provided by PWA will be put in mechanization.

Protestant Churches Join Film Protest

By Universal Service

New York, July 14—Spokesmen for 25 Protestant denominations, representing 30,000,000 church members in the United States, have voted to distribute a pledge to boycott objectionable motion pictures.

The action, taken at a meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America yesterday, came as support of the Legion of Decency drive being conducted by the Catholic Church. It bore out the statement of Cardinal Hayes that Catholics, Jews and Protestants are united in the fight.

The Protestant pledge, which will be distributed through more than 100,000 ministers, closely follows that of the Legion of Decency. The pledge says:

"I wish to join with other Protestants, co-operating with Catholics and Jews, in condemning vile and unwholesome moving pictures. I unite with all who protest against them as a grave menace to youth, to home life, to country and to religion.

"I condemn absolutely those salacious motion pictures which, with other degrading agencies, are corrupting public morals and and promoting a sex mania in our land."

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA
LAWRENCE SHAW National Director
TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS—TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Letters, Junior Birdmen, are arriving by the score, completely convincing us that the most popular feature of our activity still is the Air Dictionary lists. Your commendation of the organization on its endeavor to give aviation enthusiasts the first simple and complete aeronautical nomenclature ever published shows also that it is the most widely read item in our column.

The first section of the dictionary list, which was completed over a week ago covered the first 250 definitions and today we start section number two with 25 additional lists that will total an additional 250 words.

Schools and colleges from many sections have requested copies of our air dictionary in booklet form, but these will not be printed until the conclusion of the entire series in our daily colums. Be sure that you clip them out and save your scrap books so that you will have the valuable original list.

Maxwell Brooks

Members are reminded, at this time, that we cannot furnish back lists of this feature. Boys and girls are continually writing in for lists that they have missed but we just don't have them. You will have to watch for each set in our columns so as to be sure not to miss them. Don't wait until the paper is thrown away to decide to get the dictionary feature.

Air Dictionary List Number 26

Here is our next set of definitions:

DRAG (General)—A force tending to retard the forward motion of an aircraft caused by the resistance of the plane as it passes through the air.

DRAG (Parasite)—That portion of the drag of an aircraft exclusive of the induced drag caused by the wing lift.

DRAG ROPE—A long rope hung over the side of a balloon to act as a break and a variable ballast in making a landing. Also referred to as a "trail rope" or "guide rope."

DRIFT—Cross currents of wind, which produce an angular deviation from any set course.

DRIFTMETER—An instrument which indicates the amount of drift.

DRIP FLAP—A strip of fabric attached at one edge to an evelope of an aerostat so that rain runs off its free edge instead or dripping into the basket or car. Also called "drip band" or "drip strip."

DROOP—An increased downward curvature near the outer edge of a wing to counteract the troque (twisting) of the propeller.

"D" RING—A ring having, as its name implies, the shape of the capital letter "D" to which rope suspensions are attached.

There you are members! We're off again on our tour of inspection of air words, terms and definitions. Be sure you stop at each long enough so that at the end of this section you will be able to answer the questions in the official quiz.

We will have another set of ten definitions in a day or so. Watch for them.

Are You Abreast of All the News?

There's plenty of other club activity flying around these days and it's pretty hard to keep up with them all. It's a lucky thing we have a daily column to give us the news of doings about the country or we would have to be days behind.

William Ratcliffe, the winner of our recent national motto contest, the lucky fellow who supplied us with "Today's Pilots of Models Tomorrow's Model Pilots," is on his way across the country from New York, where he started his 15-day grand tour of the United States. He left Chicago last night and is now speedily covering territory on his way to San Francisco, where he will be given a two-day program of entertainment that will make every one of us envious.

Next there are the many wing city model plane champions who are awaiting plans to leave for Washington, D. C., to compete in the Junior Birdmen national contest where they will represent their city, and the other wing cities where contests have not yet been held and the trip to Washington still is open to all who compete with their flying models.

These champions include Terry L. Capo, of Quincy, who was victor in the Boston wing's tournament a week ago.

The Funnybone Contest will be announced in detail in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser and here's where a lot of you will be winning cash awards and have a lot of fun at the same time.

Maxwell Brooks Is Found Winner

Another analysis of timers' records brings a new name to light. It is that of Maxwell Brooks, 16, of 534 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, who edges out Raymond W. Johnston, 17, of 700 Tremont street, Boston, for fifth place in the Group "A", double stick event at the New England Derby at Franklin Park last Saturday.

As announced, Raymond Johnston's time was one minute and 10 2-5 seconds. Maxwell Brook's time was one minute and 12 seconds. This record entitles Maxwell to the Certificate of Proficiency, instead of Raymond.

Betty Johnson, 16, of Aaron street, Framingham, commander of the "Aaron-attics" Squadron Number 2, writes that her new clubhouse now being built in her backyard is nearly completed and they expect to have a party for its official opening very soon.

Squadron leaders might communicate to their own mascots that the "Aaron-attics'" mascot, a white rat, named "Allowicious Popeye Peppersauce," has been sick but is much better now.

Happy Landings!

Paralysis Victim Drowns in Storm

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 14—Frederick Schilling, 22, Brooklyn infantile paralysis victim, was drowned tonight in Saratoga Lake when he became exhausted while swimming after his rowboat which had been swept away in a sudden storm. His body has not been recovered.

Schilling plunged into the water from the boat after his daily exercises. The sudden storm blew the boat away and he drowned in choppy swells that prevented rescuers from launching a boat in answer to his cries.

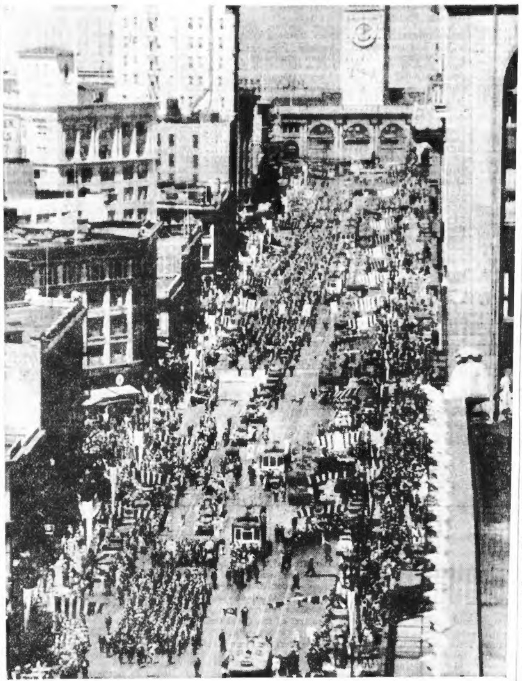
Dock Strike Dead Given Big Funeral



In a double funeral, surpassing any in Pacific Coast history, more than 12,000 San Francisco dock strikers and sympathizers paid their last tribute to two of their number shot and killed by police in a waterfront riot. The procession escorting the bodies, in flag-draped caskets, took an hour and a half to pass. This picture was snapped in Market street, looking toward the ferry house. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

Here's What's Back of Huge Pacific Coast Strike

San Francisco, July 14—The vast Pacific Coast strike, which threatens to become the most complete and violent of its kind in the history of American labor, started in the empty stomachs of San Francisco longshoremen.

While the San Francisco Central Labor Council debated whether to complete the city's partial paralysis of transportation, food production and other necessaries by calling a great general strike the issues surrounding the bitter wrangle seemed multitudinous and confused.

The longshoremen first made simple clear-cut demands. Disgusted with the manner in which the stevedore companies handed out jobs when big ships came to San Francisco to unload, they asked for an arrangement of distributing employment that would spread the available work among a greater number of men.

"HIRING HALL" PLAN

The longshoremen demanded a new job hiring arrangement. They wanted a "hiring hall," or central registration hall, which would virtually be a free employment agency with equal chance for all applicants.

The employers said this plan would practically mean a closed shop, contrary to the provisions of Section 7A of the NRA. They interpreted Section 7A—which insures to employes the right of collective bargaining by representatives of their own choosing—as meaning also that there must be no discrimination against workers either on account of union or non-union status.

Ship owners said the hiring hall system would strengthen the union's hold on the labor situation, which employers wished to avoid.

In addition to the hiring hall set-up, the workers made a point of wanting their union recognized, which would be accomplished automatically by acceptance of the first demand.

PAY RAISE SOUGHT

At the start of the movement, early in May, the freight handlers also wanted wages raised from 85 cents to $1 an hour, with $1.25 for overtime, and a 48-hour week reduced to 30. These demands are no longer an issue now, since all hands long ago agreed to arbitrate wage-and-hour points.

On May 10 several thousand dock workers went on strike at the behest of the International Longshoremen's Union, and ships coming through the Golden Gate were unable to disgorge their freight.

Ten other groups of marine workers joined the longshoremen—marine water tenders, boiler men, etc.—and swore they wouldn't return to work until the demands of all the striking unions were met. They, too, wanted recognition of their unions, and use of union-controlled hiring halls.

MANY JOIN STRIKE

Ship-owners refused to deal with them, declaring they, the employing class, had no union and consequently no spokesman.

The teamsters (truck drivers) joined the strike to the extent of refusing work that involved moving cargo on and off docks.

Now taxi drivers, bakers, cleaners and dyers, and ten other groups of workers have gone out in a sympathetic strike.

Sausage makers, butchers, laundry drivers are quitting today; the building trades have promised to join a general strike if called, and the street car men are voting on whether to tie up all the city's trolley lines.

By Monday San Francisco is expected to see almost a complete cessation of the activities of modern mechanical life.

JACOBY TEAM BRIDGE CHAMPS

By Associated Press

New London, Conn., July 14—After two whirlwind sessions which ended early today, the New York team of Oswald Jacoby, George F. Harris, Edward Hymes, Jr., and A Mitchell Barnes, captured the southern New England contract team of four championship. They gained custody of the Hartford Bridge Club trophy, with a score of 37½ matches out of 60. The winning team used the new "Four Aces" system.

Second place resulted in a tie between the Boston Chess Club team of J. A. Silin, G. A. Verde, F. K. Perkins and E. N. Marcus and the Westfield, Mass., team of Thomas Connors, James Cusack, George S. Roberts and Saul Wilson, each team having 36½ matches.

There also was a tie for third place between the team captained by P. Hal Sims of Deal, N. J., and the Holyoke, Mass., team.

At the annual election of the Building Trades Council of Boston, at 1682 Washington street, Alfred Ellis, Jr., was re-elected president. John P. Cook has been elected vice-president.

ARGUE NORMA TRIAL TUESDAY

Argument on motions for a new trial for Norma Brighton Millen, 19-year-old wife of Murton Millen, convicted bank robber and police slayer, will be heard in Dedham court Tuesday.

On the same day Judge Nelson P. Brown will hear arguments on motions demanding a new trial for Abe Faber, alleged leader of the Millen-Faber gang.

Attorneys for Norma Millen filed motions for new trial and an appeal to the State Supreme Court yesterday in the Norfolk County Superior Court.

The three petitions for appeal cited:

"The defendant, Norma Millen, being grieved by certain opinions, rulings, directions and judgment rendered against her, claims an appeal to the Massachusetts Supreme Court."

The three motions for a new trial were filed on the grounds that the jury verdict was against law and evidence that justice requires a new trial for the defendant.

Norma recently was convicted of being an accessory after the fact of the killing of two policemen during the Needham Trust Company robbery on February 2, crimes of which her husband, Murton, his brother, Irving and Faber were found guilty.

Norma is held in Dedham Jail awaiting sentence. In the same jail are the two Millen boys and Faber, who await sentence of death for their crimes.

SAN FRANCISCO FIGHTS STRIKE HUNGER

on both sides of the bay refused to take the responsibility of ordering a general walkout and passed the decision back to the unions.

HUNGER THREATENED

As a result of the pressure already applied, the San Francisco region was threatened with hunger and rationing as food supplies rapidly were depleted and perishables and meats were virtually exhausted because of the walkout of teamsters and the inability therefore to have stocks moved to stores from warehouses or the countryside.

Gasoline and oil for motorists were practically unobtainable, most of the service stations closing down or making ready to as their tanks ran dry.

And to make sure that the pressure was not eased, thousands of strike pickets had established a blockade of all roads leading into the bay region, enforcing the mandates in fights and by turning over trucks.

VIOLENCE BREAKS OUT

Violence broke out in Los Angeles last night when 300 strikers and strikebreakers engaged in a wild melee at the harbor, and were finally routed after four men were injured and twelve others were taken into custody.

None of the injured was seriously hurt in the rioting in which a few shots, which apparently went wild, were fired, bricks thrown and pipes and clubs wielded.

However, the agencies of the cities, State and Federal government were being mobilized to relieve any suffering.

Acting Governor Frank F. Merriam, whose National Guard troops now patrol the water fronts around San Francisco bay as a result of the bloody riots last week, sent out the warning that he will extend martial law throughout the affected area if the flow of food to the cities is not resumed. He said:

"There must be no shortage of food in or around San Francisco because of strike conditions.

POLICE PREPARED

"If those most directly involved do not promptly meet this situation it will become necessary that independent action be taken to guarantee that no women or children shall go hungry or face deprivation during the pendency of the labor dispute."

William J. Quinn, Chief of Police in San Francisco, declared that he is ready to furnish "safe conduct" in the moving of foodstuffs and other necessities.

And even the Federal troops were keeping a close watch on the situation from the San Francisco Presidio and the Presidio of Monterey, a hundred miles to the south.

A complete gasoline drought threatens the entire Columbia river district. Ships are held at the docks and Governor Julius Meier urged Senator McNary to bring pressure on Secretary of Labor Perkins to end the strike.

GAS SHORTAGE ACUTE

The President's maritime strike mediation board continued its efforts here to bring the warring factions together as the other affected areas on the coast indicated they would follow the lead of San Francisco.

Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, chairman of the board, appealed for arbitration on both sides in a coastwide radio talk last night.

Shipowners told the board that they would bargain collectively with representatives of the various seagoing crafts as soon as these unions have voted, by secret ballot, on their choice of representatives.

UNION OFFICIALS FIRM

However, the union officials insisted that they alone had the right to talk for their men and that the situation was deadlocked.

In blockading the bay region three men were seriously hurt and several others beaten in attacks on trucks in San Francisco; five men on a truck in Oakland drove off pickets with guns while a policeman was injured dispersing a crowd at another point; nine strikers, armed with guns and clubs, were arrested in Santa Rosa, four of them, according to police, being identified as being the men who wrecked and burned a truck loaded with fruit.

Kidnaper Note Is Branded Hoax

Webster, July 14—Police dismissed as a hoax the discovery of a purported kidnap note, found on the Webster-North Grosvenordale, Conn., road. The note read:

"Please help me. They are taking me to Worcester. Norma Auger."

At the bottom was the registration number of an automobile, one figure of which was illegible. Connecticut and Webster police investigated but could find no Norma Auger. They questioned the owner of an automobile whose registration number they thought was on the note, and were convinced he knew nothing of the case.

TWO SUSPECTS ARE FREED

Joseph Fisher, 34, and Albert LePore, both of Providence, arrested for questioning in connection with the $230,000 gem robery at Magnolia last week, were freed today.

Questioned by police of this city and Inspectors J. Henry Burgess and J. Russell Moody of the Gloucester police, the two denied knowing anything about the Magnolia robbery.

In the police lineup they were not identified for any other crimes.

Court Scorns War Debt Plea

Payment of Finland's war debt to the United States didn't help Sigurd A. Sjostron, 36, of 185 Franklin street, Cambridge, in Salem district court.

Citing the fact that Finland is the only country that has paid its war debt to the United States and the Sjostron is a native of Finland, Atty. Edward H. Shea of Salem, defense counsel, asked the court to find him not guilty of driving his automobile while drunk. Judge George B. Sears, declaring that the war had very little to do with the case, found Sjostron guilty and fined him $100 on the driving charge and $5 for drunkenness. He appealed.

OLD-TIME PLAY PRODUCED ON AIR TONIGHT

Perhaps no less than half a million amateur actors and actresses in your town, mine and the other fellows' have taken part in the offering at one time and another. Maybe your Aunt Millie or Uncle Matt will remember having played a part. Radio rahjahs of the NBC fold have figured the show has had some 50,000 small town performances during the last 25 years or more. In that case it rates with "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the so called great, but consinerably overdone emotional bit. Word comes from one Brock Pemberton, noted New York producer, that this one tonight is really a good show. He even confesses an abysmal ignorance as to why it never hit the great Gotham street of splendor and sorrow. Well, in that curious case, let's listen and hear what we shall hear.

Tomorrow night, at 9 o'clock, the first of that European ether series will come across the Atlantic waters (WEEI) at 9 p. m. Prominent performers of the English dramatic and musical comedy stage are to participate, with music by the Carroll Gibbons orchestra and the augmented Welsh Guards choir. It's a topnotch British broadcast, said to be built along strictly American lines, even to the commercial selling angle. Heretofore, the English radio realm has not indulged our system of product promotion. This, therefore, marks the opening of a weekly Sunday night sponsored series to originate in London, Berlin, Paris and Vienna, respectively. The initial importation is from London.

Shatter-proof glass may stop stones, or even bullets, but it didn't halt Miss Ruth Newhall of Ossining, N. Y., from plunging through the windshield of a Belmont man's car in a collision down in Whiting street, Hingham.

The car was operated by Horace R. Horton, of Gordon street, Belmont. Besides Miss Newhall, 4-year old Polly DeVire, also of Gordon street, was a passenger. The machine collided with one operated by Ely Musch, of Court street, Plymouth.

Miss Newhall was cut badly about the face, hands and arms and sustained a fractured ankle. The others were all injured in less degree. They were taken to Weymouth Hospital.

Julius Streicher, in a German anti-Semitic weekly in Germany, reveals the distressing fact that "Jews are turning America red." Mr. Streicher gives details and names. They include Mayor La Guardia of New York and Otto H. Kahn.

Mayor La Guardia's "redness" consists in trying to put public thieves and grafters in jail, and Otto H. Kahn is dead. If he were alive, he would not be trying to "turn America red," because gentlemen that own forty or fifty million dollars never do that.

Mr. Streicher, sure that "America is well on the way to becoming a second Soviet Russia," is mistaken.

If we should have any decided change, which is improbable now, it would probably be in the direction of Fascism, with complete suppression of "Reds."

General Johnson, of NRA, denounces killings in Germany and will take nothing back if the German government protests to our State Department against unfriendly words by a member of President Roosevelt's official family.

Events in Germany make General Johnson realize "why American editors were apprehensive about liberty of the press in the NRA code," but he thinks editors worry too much, "because Constitutional rights cannot be signed away."

However, when Fascism, or dictatorship in any form, comes, Constitutional rights are not "signed away." They are simply kicked out of the way, and that disposes of them.

If dictatorship should come here, the country would wake up some morning and find it unsafe even to mention the Constitution.

The late Jay Gould, from his present eternal dwelling place, would be interested in the spending of his money by his youngest son, Frank J. Gould. The latter built two "important" gambling houses in France at Nice. One burned down, demonstrating the activity of Providence.

Gould millions will restore that, or have restored it.

Mr. Gould built also, at great cost, a fine hotel and winter resort at Breuil, near Nice, and a great hotel in Nice, the idea being to attract and hold prosperous gamblers close to the Gould gambling houses.

The Breuil institution is in bankruptcy, the Gould Hotel Majestic, at Nice, is not bankrupt, but closed. Frank J. Gould, said to have invested twenty million dollars in the promotion of gambling, appears to be less sound than the original Jay Gould in making investments.

GATES' WIDOW WEDS AGAIN

Exactly 13 months after her husband died from a mysterious fall in a Harvard laboratory, Mrs. Frederic Lamont Gates surprised friends in Cambridge and Cape Cod today with her second marriage at Lebanon, N. J.

Her new husband was announced as Leo Elsmith of New York City, who recently received a degree in music at Harvard and an old friend of Mrs. Gates since both resided in Duluth, Minn.

The ceremony was revealed by W. J. Olcott of Duluth, former president of the Oliver Iron Mining Company, in an announcement given at the summer home of Mrs. Gates at Woods Hole. Olcott said it took place this week. He would give no further details.

The new Mrs. Elsmith was the wife of Dr. Frederick Lamont Gates, whose death was considered a martrydom to science. He collapsed in a laboratory at Harvard medical school while working over a series of blood tests a year ago last June. Two students discovered the unconscious form of Dr. Gates at that time. Doctors at Cambridge City Hospital said he suffered concussion of the brain and a fatal fracture of the skull.

DE MILLE PLANS NEW PICTURE OF PAGEANTRY AND RELIGIOUS ENTHUSIASM

Rudy Vallee in New Burst of Luck Cashes in on Horse and Contract

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, July 14—I should say it's a far cry from the early pirate days of "The Buccaneer" to the medieval period of the crusades. Cecil B. De Mille, who has earned for himself the title of screen preacher, is bridging that gap in one big jump. He is discarding the pirate story and the marauding days of Henry Morgan in favor of Richard the Lion-Hearted, and Sultan Saladin.

Louella O. Parsons

C. B. says too many pirate stories are being produced, but personally I have an idea that my old friend believes that this is an ideal time to present a religious theme. Certainly no one is better qualified than he to picture those days of color, pageantry and religious enthusiasm. Harold Lamb, who has written many successful medieval stories has been summoned to write the scenario.

Far better to be born lucky than rich. "Take Rudy Vallee. He placed a long shot bet on a nag which had the same name as the cafe where he is now crooning. The horse paid $30 to $1 and Rudy cleaned up. Now he has signed a long term contract, with Warner Brothers to make one picture a year.

He is in luck again because when Jack Warner first approached him to play the lead role in "Sweet Music" he couldn't accept because of matrimonial difficulties. Now Fay Webb and he have made a settlement and he is free to put his name on a movie contract. His third piece of luck is having Joan Blondell co-star with him when he starts in "Sweet Music" or some other opera in October.

Watch Educational pictures cash in on Shirley Temple's popularity. Before the poular Shirley became the talk of the year and a $1000 a week actress, she made a series of shorts for Educational. At that time they weren't particularly valuable, now they are money in the bank and will be reissued.

Shirley is the biggest discovery of the year. In New York everyone wants to hear about her and to know if she is as enchanting off the screen as on. Not only do children do Shirley Temple imitations, but all the grownups want to hear about her.

There is a great big chance of a reconcilliation for Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller. Lupe and Johnny were the guests of the Arthur Stebbins at dinner Wednesday night. They had an opportunity to talk things over and Johnny admitted that he was in the wrong. Nothing a woman likes better than having a first-class apology and in telling me about it, Lupe said: "I go through with my divorce but if 10 days before the final decree I decide to return to him we drop it. I think it's better for both of us to separate for a year."

Hollywood Chatter

All the solemn vows made by Patsy Ruth Miller to never marry again when she divorced Tay Garnett, may be forgotten. Patsy is very, very much that way about talented John Mahin, scenario writer, and he is equally fascinated with the charms of Miss Miller who is one of the most brilliant girls in Hollywood.

Pat herself is writing and I am told, has had several stories accepted by that ultra smart "Vanity Fair." Almost any evening, Patsy can be seen watching the boy friend bowl at the Beverly Bowling Alleys, where this form of exercise is extremely popular.

The first time I ever saw Claire Trevor on the screen, I wouldn't have given 10 cents for her chances as a star. Shows how wrong snap judgment can be. Claire Trevor is shooting right up to the top and the Fox Company is assisting her in her climb to fame by picking out special stories for her. She is to have the title role in "The State Versus Elinor Norton." Mary Roberts Rinehart's widely read novel.

Sol Wurtzel who was the first one to vote in favor of Miss Trevor is producing this little number with Hamilton McFadden directing. And just so that the story will have all that it needs, Rose Franken, author of "Another Language," and Philip Klein are adapting it.

That Irish lad, Phil Regan, who used to be one of New York's finest before he followed Horace Greeley's advice and traveled to Hollywood, is coming right along. Phil has a singing voice that gets a nation-wide response when he sings on the radio, and now it looks as if his motion picture career will be on a par with his radio fame.

He has just been handed one of the fattest roles in "Sweet Adeline" by Warners and a new contract with more money and a promise of increasingly good roles. With Dick Powell and Phil Regan, Warner Brothers have two good voices and two vibrant personalities.

C. FIELDS and FANNY BRICE reminiscing over the early days in the "Follies;" ROGER DAVIS who knows all the answers even before the questions are asked keeping Hollywood in continual good humor with his quips; PEANUTS BYRON, GEORGE RAFT'S first Hollywood girl friend, now happily married to LOU BRESLOW, dining with him tete a tete. Max Scores in Clown Revue on Met Stage

By HARRIS MORGAN

In a return title bout against John Public, Max Baer scored another knockout at the Metropolian Theater in his personal appearance as the chief asset of a revue called "Clowning Around," with his brother, Buddy Baer, and Benny Rubin, a local boy, as assistants.

Max scored his first K. O. as an actor in the picture "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

Max and a film titled "Midnight Alibi," Richard Barthelmess starred, opened yesterday and will play a full week at the Met. It is our aim to influence our reader-supporters toward trekking toward the Metropolitan in squadrons. They will be rewarded for the trek.

Informality is the keynote (not a speech) of the performance, especially when Mr. Baer and Mr. Rubin hold the stage in duo. The informality is akin to the mood prevailing when a couple of popular boys have been drafted from a reunion audience for an impromptu performance.

The champion throughout maintains a pleasing attitude of what-does-it-matter, and Mr. Rubin is as quick as Jack Dalton on the trigger, when it comes to springing comedy. Maxie sings a bit and clowns a lot.

The picture, "Midnight Alibi" is something they have Hollywood-ed out of a Damon Runyon story called "The Old Doll's House." Richard Barthelmess is the ruthless gangster who is just a big boy at heart.

Duke Ellington at Orpheum

Duke Ellington, with his customary tonnage of tin, returned yesterday to Loew's Orpheum and blasted his way into another first-day triumph to the huzzahs and shouts of his faithful.

The Harlem maestro has lost nothing in technique or mass-appeal. For hot music, he is readily the equal of Louis Armstrong, Cab Calloway or even Eddie Duchin. The Duke—heh, heh—offers an arrangement of his own in the way of a program and it is good.

Ivie Anderson tied the show in knots with her singing and dancing and "Snake Hips" Tucker was encored to the limit with the Blazer Brothers (four of them) contributing runner-up dance performance in a series of routines that placed stress on uniformity of movement.

Jimmy Durante tops a variegated cast, which includes such diversified types as Polly Moran and Lupe Velez in "Hollywood Party," the screen offering.

DIVERS SAIL FOR $7,000,000

New Bedford, July 14—The William H. Moody, a salvage lighter, was on the way to Hedge Fence shoal, off Martha's Vineyard, today and when she is joined by deep-sea divers, attempts will be made to wrench a $7,000,000 cargo from the sea.

The reputed sum is locked in the sunken wreck of the Cunard freighter Port Hunter, which went down in seven fathoms of water Nov. 22, 1918.

The Port Hunter sailed from Boston loaded with army supplies, en route for France. It was on its way to join a convoy in New York when it rammed by the Boston sea tug Covington. The captain and 53 men were saved.

Oath by Teachers Demanded by VFW

Syracuse, N. Y., July 14 (INS)—The Veterans of Foreign Wars, at their annual encampment here, today joined forces with numerous civic groups, favoring a mandatory oath of allegiance to the United States for all public school teachers.

A resolution to that effect was approved by a committee, and unanimously voted upon. It was suggested a bill requiring the oath be passed at the current special session of the legislature.

Colman Stars In New Film at State

By PATRICIA BRENT

After a year's absence from the screen—a welcome respite surely from playing the erring husband, the misunderstanding lover—the beloved rogue—Ronald Colman returns to film action at Loew's State Theater in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back."

Ronald Colman

It will be remembered that one of Mr. Colman's most effective early-talkie-era roles was "Bulldog Drummond." Well, the years have been kind to the screen Bulldog Drummond. He is more heroic, more dauntless, more courageous than ever.

And Mr. Colman's comeback in his famous characterization is as able, as whole-hearted, as effective, as it was when first offered the public. Captain Drummond is suave and deliberate in all the trying situations with which the authors have burdened him.

Once, with at least one leg drooping over the threshold of doom, he pulls himself up victoriously for the final fadeout.

Loretta Young, the supporting heroine, finds this the occasion to wring her hands fretfully over the fate of two men. One is her uncle, who has vanished mysteriously from the home of an Oriental prince and the other is, if you don't suspect, Mr. Colman. It happens to be Mr. Colman who rises to the occasion and rescues Loretta from a "fate worse than death."

The continuity at no time becomes completely unreasonable, and at all times, the story is intriguing. This new Bulldog Drummond is not the rich part afforded Mr. Colman in either "Arrowhead" or "Cynara," but it is a role that cannot possibly hurt the leading man with his admirers.

SOCIETY DOG IN BITE FIGHT

By Universal Service

Cannes, France, July 14—Two prominent Riviera society women, one an American and the other French, have started a court battle because the American lady's pet Airedale, "Hemlock," ripped the French lady's lounging pajamas and bit her leg during a cocktail party.

Mme. Teixeira De Mattos, the former Georgia Lavery of St. Louis, owner of "Hemlock," was seated at a table next to Mme. Le Fevbre Despaux.

Suddenly, Mme. Lefevbre, clad in lounging pajamas, rose to greet a new arrival and tripped over the dog's leash. "Hemlock" ripped the pajamas to tatters and scratched the lady's legs with his teeth.

Firemen Called to Costello Home

Peabody, July 14—Firemen from the Central fire station where the late Captain William J. Costello for years was stationed paid an unexpected visit to the home of his widow, Jessie B. Costello on Fay street, to extinguish a fire in Costello wooden garage which caused about $150 damage.

Two of the Costello children were burning waste paper in an incinerator when sparks carried by a wind showered the garage.

WHITE LACE over white satin on princess lines, clouded with misty tulle fashions the wedding gown of Miss Anna Dwight Howard, as she walks up the aisle today on the arm of her stepfather, Mr. Robert Fraser to meet Mr. Alexander P. Mitchell-Innes. She is carrying a shower of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Little Miss Olivia Raymond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Raymond, Jr., of Dedham, precedes her as flower girl, and her sister, Miss Gertrude W. Howard attends her as maid of honor. They are wearing rose crepe on princess lines with ruffled hem and will wear large leghorn hats lined with rose. Arm bouquets are of African daisies. The Dr. Francis Lee Whittemore is officiating in St. Paul's Church, Dedham, which is bedecked in the green and white of lilies, cypress trees, ferns and roses.

Greek Choir to Give Concert

DOWN ON THE NORTH SHORE these days, music lovers are giving more than passing thought to an evening of entertainment which comes on Wednesday, July 18, when the Hammond Museum at Gloucester will be opened by Dr. John Hays Hammond, Jr., to benefit the Home and School Visitors Association of Boston and Beverly Farms Music School.

The robed choir of the Greek Cathedral in Boston will be presented at that time in a program of Byzantine music under the direction of Mr. George Alevizos. The lofty vaunted Great Hall of the castle-museum is particularly adapted to music

• • •

Museum Opened for First Time

THIS IS THE FIRST OCCASION that Mr. Hammond has consented to the use of the museum building for an affair of this kind and it will probably be the only time that the Great Hall may be seen by the public other than during the usual summer forenoon visiting hours.

Wisely, the committee has decided to limit the ticket sale, lest too great a number detract from the complete enjoyment of music lovers who may assemble. Indirect lighting and candles in the Gothic torches will lend an added atmosphere to the Middle Ages effect, and Greek choir, chanting the music of Byzantine origin, is sure to provide an effect to interest even those Shore visitors who have had much of music during the winter months.

Mrs. E. Sohier Welch

Unique Stunts Planned for Gala Event

ON SATURDAY, July 28, Frog lane in Marblehead will be the scene of another famous Marblehead Street Fair. Ancient Frog lane, running by old St. Michael's church, will be lined with exhibitions, games and booths.

It will be in some parts reminnscent of Colonial days, in other sections one will be reminded of Paris, or a country fair, or a children's paradise. The committee sponsoring this carnival to raise money for the protection of St. Michael's historic relics, has arranged entertainment for every age, from morning till midnight.

Acting as chairman, Mr. Harold Hodgkinson is assisted by Mr. Francis A. Parker and by the treasurer, Mrs. Hodgkinson. Mrs. Edwin W. Preston, Mrs. Robert C. Terry, Mr. George Stephenson and Mr. Earle Davis, as the publicity committee are evolving several stunts to command the public's attention.

Music, which in such varied forms as street singers, band concerts and jazz orchestras, will last as long as the fair, is under the supervision of Mr. Alexander Cleary, aided by Mrs. Carl Dreyfus.

For the historic-minded there will be Mrs. Myles Standish's exhibition of early American glass and antiques as well as the famous Peter Bours portrait in St. Michael's Church. Mrs. William Bowden is acting as head mistress to show this portrait which after so interesting and controversial a past has been returned to Marblehead for a day.

Given in Marriage

— By Adele Garrison —

Catherine Bickett Revives the Story of a Long Forgotten Letter From Her Husband in South America.

CHAPTER 88

I DO NOT think there is any other such healing for frayed nerves as lies in the touch of a little child. As I felt the tiny body of my daughter, Faith, close in my arms, and touched my fingers lightly to her rose leaf cheek, I felt all the tremors and irritations of the day scurry away like frightened rabbits.

It was an abode of peace, I thought—this quiet nursery where Katherine kept wise guard over my idolized child— and as I sat I gave myself up to the sheer joy of feeling that soft, tiny face and hands so close to my own.

"May I rock her?" I asked Katherine pleadingly.

QUIETED NERVES

"Go ahead!" my little kinswoman answered, adding whimsically, "Rock her to sleep; she's almost due for a nap."

"I'm going to," I said, "I'm not a bit altruistic today. I'm even going to sing to her."

"She's asleep," I whispered at last, and Katherine, who had seated herself by the window looking out over the lawn, came swiftly toward me.

"Shall I take her, or do you wish to put her in the crib yourself?" she asked.

"You," I returned hastily. "I'm so afraid she may wake and spoil it all."

Katherine stooped and took the tiny, sleeping form from me, then stood looking down upon my daughter with such unconscious love and longing in her eyes that I felt my heart contract with an old pain. It was made up partly of pity for Katherine's thwarted motherhood, and party of a jealous fear that my child, because of her care and my absence, might grow to love the faithful nurse better than me, her mother.

But the unworthy part of that pain lasted only for the fraction of a second, and there was nothing but love and compassion in my eyes as Katherine moved away and tenderly, skilfully deposited the sleeping babe in her crib. When she returned to me, I caught at her hand and drew her down until her cheek touched mine.

"Katrina, Katrina," I said huskily, "what would I ever do without you?"

She raised her head as if I had struck her.

"Why do you say that just at this time?" she asked. "Are you clairvoyant?"

JACK BICKETT'S LETTER

I stared at her, then at something in her eyes, and I rose quickly, facing her.

I saw my mistake before the words were fairly out of my mouth. She would have offered me her confidence, but at that crass question she shrank into herself.

"No, I don't mean that," she said.

"Forgive me," I pleaded. "I should not have asked you that; but I could not think of any other reason why you should think of leaving here?"

Her eyes were suddenly somber, troubled.

"Couldn't you?" she asked. "Suppose—"

She stopped short, her eyes suddenly looking away, while I stood miserable, not knowing what to say, undecided as to whether I should speak at all.

"Do you remember?" she asked at last, still keeping her eyes averted from me, "that awful letter that woman wrote me from South America, where she said Jack — Jack wanted to have me—"

INVOLVING MADGE

Did I remember that cruel, insolent letter, which I believed to be a trumped up falsehood, in which the sister of Jack Bickett's associate in South America told Katherine that her husband wished her to divorce him because he loved the writer of the letter? That letter was seared in my memory, not alone because of its contents, but because I had sent it back to my brother-cousin without Katherine's knowledge.

Useless to exculpate my action by the remembrance of how strenuously I had tried to get it back, after it had been posted by accident. The impulse had been mine, and I feared that Katherine would never forgive me if she should ever find out what I had done.

With a sudden impulse I gripped her arms.

"Yes, I remember that lying letter, but you should not. Why do you speak of it now?"

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

A charming person needn't be pretty, and she needn't be of any particular coloring. Charm is more powerful than any physical quality you please. Most of it comes right along with you when you're born, but a little of it can be acquired.

Bread Board Tacks

If the bread board slips when used on the enamel top kitchen table, try pushing four flat rubber-tipped tacks into it, one at each corner of the underside. Such tacks are to be found at the five-and-ten cent stores, the hardware stores and elsewhere, for use in chair legs.

ELUSIVELY SWEET AURA CAST BY SACHET IS BACK IN FASHION AGAIN

The Beret Casts Its Fall Shadow Ahead

By Prunella Wood

THE BERET cannot be buried, as one cogent advertiser puts it, and pun or no pun, it's the simple truth. But this crop of berets is very fresh and new looking, in many ingenious variations, in many sizes, and trimmed with unfamiliar devces.

Right now one could rejoice in one of the models of picture hat dimensions, made of thin dark blue velvet with a large, uneven brimmed silhouette, something like a peasant head-dress of stiff linen. It would show off a handsome lingerie frock or a dark city sheer in a big way, though it may take some wearing and a conspiracy with the hairdresser before it sets becomingly over the face.

Later on we shall be wearing fur berets which scoop up on one side with an Alpini bravo, or which show a turban-like edge that reminds one of Little Women —even to the row of tiny stuffed birds edging it.

With city sheers, printed ensembles and even cocktail chiffons the velvet beret combines masterfully.

Jiffy Suppers for Healthy Appetites

By Martha Lee

Here's a luncheon or supper menu for four healthy appetites. It hits the spot without hurting the pocketbook. It's easy to prepare, yet makes a delightfully healthful variation from those frequent "sandwich suppers" of summertime.

Escalloped Ham
Lettuce and Tomato Salad
Crusty Rolls
Raspberry Cobbler
Beverage

1½ pound slice of cured ham
2 carrots, diced
2 tablespoons chopped parsley.
2 cups sweet milk
6 potatoes (sliced thin)
1 teaspoon grated onion

Soak ham in cold water one hour, or parboil 20 minutes. In a well-greased casserole, place a layer of potato; cover with half the other vegetables, mixed; add ham slice; cover with the remainder of mixed vegetables; place a layer of potato on top. Cover with hot milk. Bake in hot oven, 400 Deg. F., for one hour.

RASPBERRY COBBLER

Line a well-greased and floured baking pan with short biscuit dough; fill with fresh or canned berries; add 4 tablespoons liquid, 3 or 4 tablespoons sugar and 2 tablespoons of flour to a pint of berries. Cover with more biscuit dough and bake in moderate to hot oven 30 to 45 minutes. This may be cooked with the ham.

Registering at Hotel

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have noticed that on hotel registers a man signs "Mr. John Doe and wife," yet I have been under the impression that Mr. and Mrs. John Doe was correct. Which is correct. H.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, New York, is the form a man should use when registering in a hotel for himself and his wife. He should not register Mr. John Smith and wife.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please be so kind as to let me know if it is all right to wear silver shoes with black crepe evening dress to a dance? HELEN.

Yes.

Modern Perfumer Is Making Sachets of Famous Odors for Elegant Touch

POSED BY JEAN MUIR

By Juliet Shelby

SACHET IS "SMART AGAIN" because fashion has whimsically borrowed the fine feathers of the Gay 'Nineties and endowed them with a newer charm. The modern woman, reverting to the eloquent femininity and fastidious grooming of her Victorian counterpart, has found a breath of romance in this fragrant powder.

When our mothers talked about the Victorian Era they were almost sure to describe it as "lavender scented." Lavender in those days was a nicety, a pretty manifestation of the elegance which distinguished the period.

In tribute to the revival of Victorian furbelows, a famous parfumer now offers sachet in a new guise. You may choose your favorite fragrance in sachet form and I'll wager right now that its delightful aura has more glamour than the lavender of mother's day.

This lovely new sachet will make life infinitely sweeter when put up in tiny silk bags and tucked into dresser drawers, or into the pockets of garments taken from camphor-lined trunks and closets. It comes in a newly styled flacon and can easily be dusted into bureau drawers or hat boxes or hung inside closets in neat little bags.

I know of a deoderant that not only prevents perspiration odors but actually stops perspiration itself. During the summer months every woman faces the unpleasant fact that she cannot avoid certain body odors. This deodorant will give you a better poise and you can be sure that your charms will not be destroyed by offensive perspiration if you apply a bit at bedtime. It has a lasting protection of three days and that is a long time when you consider that daily baths and rub downs frequently destroy the affectiveness of usual deodorants.

Blue Shadow

Question: Can you tell me what shade of eye-shadow is suitable for blue eyes, light brown hair and dark complexion? move a light growth of hair from my chin?

I. G. L., Peabody.

Answer: With blue eyes wear blue eye shadow, it will make your eyes bluer and more charming. Use the cream shadow and blend it carefully, close to the upper lashes. Wear brown mascara, and for your dark skin, geranium or tawny rouge will be lovely.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

I've tried to repress my grievances against my husband for so long that if I don't tell somebody I'm afraid I'll bust right out some night when we're having company for dinner.

It's not one thing, it's endless things. He's always swinging his foot and kicking my chair in restaurants. And clicking coins — why he'll click coins until it gives me the jitters. Another thing, he has a habit of talking with a pipe in his mouth and mumbling so that I can't hear a thing he's saying. And curt on the phone? Why that man is so tactless I'm always having to tell him to ask who it is and what they want and to tell them this and to ask them that.

When I do that he says I've too much tact. That I try so hard to make people comfortable I make them uncomfortable. He says I'm always asking guests to take another chair ceuase it's deeper or begging them to stay when I wish they'd clear out. But doesn't every successful hostess do that?

MRS. EMMA S., Provincetown.

DEAR MRS. EMMA S.:

It takes a heap o' livin' to learn that the easiest way to sail the tempestuous sea of matrimony is to circumnavigate the other's sensitive points. You have them, Emma, as well as your faulty Mr. S. It's easier to diagnose them than to cure them. You could discuss them to a farethewell and do the same fool things all over again the next minute. So, be a good girl, Emma—bear and forbear.

CAST INTO EDEN -:- By Henry C. Rowland

SYNOPSIS

Jerome Crain, young ship builder, and a lovely society girl, named Linda, escape in a skiff from a yacht held in quarantine off San Cristobal. Jerome and Linda dislike each other, but, nevertheless, are willing to risk being mutually bored rather than endure an indefinite stay aboard ship. From the moment they land on a strange island, queer happenings occur.

Their boat is set adrift, their clothing stolen; yet there is no other sign of a living human except periodic cries from the jungle. Exploring, they come upon a small plantation and house having every appearance of being well tended, but vacant.

Dozing on the porch, Jerry awakens with the creepy impression that something had brushed his face. Soon Linda shrieks—her slip had been torn off by unseen hands in the dark.

CHAPTER X

They set out to explore in the direction from which the sound of the bell had come. Thick jungle grew up to the edge of the plantation and they followed this round, hoping to strike a path. There was no path, but the growth was dry and not impenetrable. The ground sloped upward at an easy grade that was interrupted by ledges a few feet in height forming natural terraces.

Before long the undergrowth thinned and the going was easier. It was mostly of grape trees with scattered yuccas and larger trees spaced well apart. They skirted a marshy swale that appeared to be a pocket for the recent rains. Beyond there was a higher and steeper ledge that from a distance looked artificial, but proved to be an outcrop of ligneous rock deeply fissured and eroded.

As they climbed up and over the brim of this ecarpment they found themselves on a plateau that swung in a circular formation like the flattened top of an ancient crater.

There was a low, square crumbling tower, all that remained of a heap of ruins partly screened by some gnarled old cedars and other trees that were low and spreading. The orderly arrangement showed these trees to have been set out many years ago, three centuries, perhaps.

The top of the partly ruined tower was open, with high pointed Gothic arches on its four sides.

"An old monastery," Jerome said. "But nobody can be living in it now."

"Then there must be some other hang-out for this troupe."

"Back in the grove, perhaps. There must have been a colony here at some time."

They crossed the intervening space where the ground was hard and arid with outcrops of volcanic rock. There was no sign of any tenantry. Then as they approached the ruins there came a stir in the tangle that filled them. They caught a glimpse of a figure in a pale blue garment that scurried into the thicker scrub beyond.

CURIOUS CRY HEARD

"That looked like the shirt I was wearing when we landed on this crazy island," Jerome said.

As he spoke the curious cry to which they were growing more accustomed welled out from some invisible source. This time it sounded less mocking, more angry, and it held a frightened note.

They left it unsolved and went over to the ruin. There was nothing to inspect but the tower and a sector of wall in which was a big doorway with a flattened arch the early Spaniards seemed to favor, and which has proved curiously resistant to time. The rest was hidden in cactus and creepers. Such old monasteries were to be found in remote locations like this round the shores of the Spanish Main.

A narrow beaten path led to the tower. They followed this and entered an enclosure about twelve feet square. It was stone flagged and bare, with long pointed arched windows and a narrow stone stair that spiralled to the bell tower. There had been another floor and the loft, but these had fallen in.

Entering from the vivid glare outside, Linda stumbled on something. Then, as her pupils reacted to the dim light, she saw that it was one of Jerome's rubber-soled deck shoes.

He picked it up and carried it to the door, then he looked at the sole.

"This is what the fool was using to whang the bell."

"How do you know?"

"Verdigris on the new sponge rubber heel. That's what made the bell sound muffled—and the crack in it. Let's hunt round for the mate."

They failed to find it, but Linda found her other silk stocking, which, having nothing else to do with it, she put on.

SHOE ON CLAPPER

Jerome said, "We could put on a castaway comedy sketch. I in blue striped shorts and one shoe, and you in a man's sport shirt, one stocking, and a pair of snappy shoes. It's the one stocking that gives the raffish touch."

Linda grabbed his arm. "Look!" She pointed to the old cracked bell over their heads.

The sun was streaming in and diffused a little from the light grey stone, but the cavity of the bell was dark. Projecting from it was apparently the toe of a man's shoe.

"Gosh, that spells it! This bird is crazy. He's rammed the clapper of the bell into my shoe."

Jerome got up into the embrasure of the window beside the bell, but could not reach the clapper. The height was not great, but it was trying to look down into the dark interior. He same down and twisted off a tough length of vine with which he finally snared the shoe and dragged it off.

They crossed the plateau and made their way to a point, commanding a view of the crater lake.

"That's the source of our brook," Jerome said. "It fills up in the rainy season and funds the water that leaks out slowly through a channel underground. Before it drains the rains come and fill it up again. Even dry-season showers would probably be enough."

Going down to the edge they could seen occasionally a silver flash in the water that was clear like that in a granite quarry.

"This lake is full of fish," said Jerome.

"How do they get into it way up here?"

"Hatched out from spawn, and carried in the maws or feet or plumage of birds," Jerome said.

"I wonder if anybody ever comes here."

"Nothing to come for. We're pretty well inside the power vessel course up and down the coast. Ships keep well clear of the Mosquito Bank."

He did not tell her what an extensive job it would be to comb the islands of the far-flung Mosquito Bank. Instead he said, "There's nothing really to fear from this band of half-witted aborigines. They're prankish and shy."

"I wish though we could account for them," Linda said.

"They'll get used to our being here and show themselves before long," he assured her. "Every living creature, however furtive, craves the company of the superior race."

"That seems to be the trouble. Tonight we'll go inside and lock up as soon as it gets dark."

Breaking Iron-Clad Contract

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In defending hands, particularly those which are being played at notrump, the defense must always be prepared to shift suits on a second's notice. The careful player must realize that it will avail him little to set up low cards of a suit if he has no possible way of getting in to cash these cards. Therefore one should never be blindly led astray by the fact that the Declarer shows fear of a certain suit by holding up his stopper. As a matter of fact this very hold-up by the Declarer will defeat your ends if it removes your own or your partner's last communication card. A beautiful overtake and shift by the West player in the hand below will bring about the defeat of an otherwise iron-clad contract.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

North:
♠ A J 5
♡ K Q 10
♢ A Q J 5 4
♣ 10 3

West:
♠ 10 9 7
♡ J 6 3 2
♢ 8
♣ K 7 6 4 2

East:
♠ K Q 6
♡ 9 5 4
♢ K 6 3 2
♣ Q J 8

South:
♠ 8 4 3 2
♡ A 8 7
♢ 10 9 7
♣ A 9 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♢ (1)	Pass	2 NT (2)	Pass
3 NT (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) It is very close whether North should make the fairly weak bid of two diamonds, or the much stronger bid of two notrump. The North hand contains about four honor tricks. However, there is a glaring weakness in the club suit which makes notrump play appear dangerous, and North decides to allow for the possibility of his partner's notrump response having been made on a minimum or shaded holding.

(2) South, with two Aces and a Ten spot, has more than a minimum notrump response. He realizes that his partner could have passed to one notrump and that the two-diamond bid shows rebid strength. South, accordingly, rebids to two notrump.

(3) North obviously must contract for game.

In the play, West opens his fourth best club, on which East plays the Jack. South quite properly holds off and again holds up his Ace when East leads the club Queen. At this point the West player should stop and take stock. It is naturally quite obvious to him that South is holding up with the club Ace to prevent him from getting in and running the suit.

The West player must further realize that South's plan will meet with success, as, after West has set up two more club tricks, he will never be able to get in again to cash them. Even though East gets in, he will obviously have no more cards of this suit to lead.

West, therefore, must overtake the club Queen with the club King in order to shift suits. His best shift of course is to spades, and to trick four West leads the spade Ten. South now cannot prevent East and West from setting up two spade tricks. These two tricks, in addition to the two club tricks already won and the King of diamonds, which East must eventually make, permit East and West to defeat the contract.

MUSICAL NOTE

The key position in our life
Is held supremely by the wife,
Who meets and bridges with her friends
To fathom all the recent trends
In politics as well as art,
And other problems far apart
From duties in the home, which she Thinks are not what they used to be.
In short her time is occupied
In keeping husbands well denied,
And seeing that they do not eat
Enough to render them effete.

If luck holds out, a husband may
Be dined on tepid consomme;
For salad: News of all her friends,
For dressing: Hints on recent trends.

Austen Lake

IN BOUNCING AROUND the American sport scene, I have known and observed all the modern professional athletic giants Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Strangler Lewis, Ty Cobb, Bill Tilden and Eddie Shore among the many. Yet, if I were to nominate the one man who embodies the most alert physical, mental and spiritual qualities, i. e., strikes the highest average in the pro sport field, I would unhesitatingly name Jim Londos, the co-champion with Ed George of the wrestling world.

This is a conscientious opinion, just as I firmly believe that sometime during the night of July 18, next Wednesday, Londos (born Christopher Theophilo in the town of Agras, Greece, in 1894), will become the undisputed champion.

Londos lives for wrestling and eschews the little human vices, like breathing the fumes of tobacco and swallowing frisky beverages. He has the same vivid expression as a spirited race horse, the quick intelligent eye, brisk action, lively reflex and nervous spark.

Had he, instead of choosing wrestling as a profession, with his fungus ears and freight handlers muscles, selected law or medicine, I believe he would have scaled the heights of those professions as readily. Because, he is the student type, with an everlasting curiosity and an intense beam of concentration that strikes deeply into a subject.

* * *

Between Max Baer and Londos, with whom I divided the morning, there is a long gap. Max is shrewd, cute in the animal sense, perhaps with the mental age of 16. But his mental light is fuzzy and dim beside the flame of the little Greek's mind.

Did I say "little." The fact is that Londos, though he weighs more than Baer, is compact and built to deceiving proportions, so that he actually seems to weigh a good 40 pounds less than the glove champion.

It is this compactness which is going, I feel, to contribute to George's defeat next Wednesday. Because George has never wrestled so short a man, with such stocky legs and arms. So that, in standing holds, Londos will be pulling down with the aid of gravity (200 pounds) while George will, of necessity, be pulling up or against gravity. Maybe you don't think that means anything to a wrestler!

The Prodigal Son Returns to Honor His Old Father

LONDOS' IS A human story. Of a thirteenth child, born to a father who came from a line of Greek mountaineers and to a mother whose forbears were professional people. The lad, restless, shipped in boyhood to this country and having a physical culture twist, early learned the rudiments of wrestling.

It is nearly 20 years since his father wrote, forbidding him to enter professional wrestling lest he disgrace the family name.

"If you insist," warned the old man, "I must disown you as a son."

Christopher Theophilis did insist, resenting adult interference, and decided to change the name, which was no longer his, to Jim Londos, taking his cue from Jack London, the novelist.

The years passed by and last summer, Jimmy, claiming the world title, went back to Greece to be welcomed by the premier, diplomatic corps, officials and people of Athens. In the Olympic Stadium, before 100,000 people, he wrestled a Russian named Kaarina.

Before the match, according to ancient Greek custom, his father, now 81, led his son into the arena and presented him to the throng. There were tears in the old man's eyes as he said, "Theos mize sou" (God care for thee). The great multitude rose in a great wave of voice and saluted the venerable father and the son whom he had disowned.

"That was the biggest moment of my life," said Londos today, in English that still carries the brittle burr of his homeland.

Cub's President Resumes Old Chicago Custom

PERHAPS IT IS significant that President Bill Walker of the Chicago Cubs has been trailing his club during the Eastern tour, having spent the stay here in Boston. Because there are persistent rumors that if the team does not win the National League pennant, Charley Grimm will go the way of Rogers Hornsby and Joe McCarthy.

I recall the ominous visit which the late William Veeck made to Boston in the summer of 1932, when he was waiting an opportunity to crack down on Hornsby's skull with a figurative milk bottle. Only the Cubs of that year, as the Cubs of this, swept the Braves series and Veeck had to delay his execution until he reached Philadelphia.

Presidents of major league clubs seldom travel with their units, and then only for good reasons. So that Grimm now is feeling the stab of uneasiness that Hornsby and McCarthy knew before him.

* * *

UNDER NORMAL FINANCIAL conditions, Judge Fuchs of the Braves would now be scouring the country for material needed to revive the drooping Braves and to keep them within hand reach of the top.

But, unfortunately, this year the club is handcuffed financially, and Fuchs, once known as baseball's David Harum, has little chance of picking up the player or two who might give the Braves a pennant punch. The team has now lost nine of its last 10 games, after having, on July 4, the highest percentage in 10 years.

In past seasons Fuchs has reached out many times in an emergency and bought an infielder or outfielder to patch the tears in his team's fabric. But this summer he is obliged to sit sadly and silently by and watch his men wilt, unable to lift a hand to help them or himself.

BLANEY, NIES IN DUEL FOR GOLF TITLE

By Bill Grimes

Two gamesters with far more than the average ability, Bill Blaney, Brae Burn, and Johnny Nies, United Shoe, are playing a 36-hole final in the 30th Massachusetts amateur championship today at The Country Club.

Bill Blaney is making his third try to negotiate the final barrier in a state championship. Four years ago, at Salem, Blaney was stopped by Freddie Wright in the finals, and in 1932 Eddie Kirouac took over the title that Wright had allowed to go by default by defeating Bill in the wind-up round.

On the other hand Nies is making his debut as a finalist. Nies has reached the semifinals for three consecutive years, but this is the first time he ever weathered that test.

BLANEY BEATS CHAMP

After qualifying with six strokes to spare, Blaney went through Lewis M. Grimball, Belmont Spring, Bobby Knowles, Country Club, Wilfred Crossley, Norfolk, and Joe Lynch, the defending champion, to reach today's finals.

Nies who was 76, 79—155 for the 36 hole qualifications, started off by eliminating Fred Harmon, Wollaston, and Wm Cobb, Jr during the opening day of match play. Then he put out Wright, a former winner of the state amateur golf crown, and Francis "Ancy" Doyle, Wachusett.

During their drives to the finals, Blaney and Nies met up with about the same brand of opposition. Nies came through with the first big upset when he defeated Fred Wright in the quarter finals but Blaney stole the show during the semifinals by beating Joe Lynch, Blue Hill, the defending champion.

MAHAN IS HIS BOOSTER

Blaney is a former New England amateur titleholder and went to the semifinals in the national amateur championship at Rye Farms, two years ago.

Nies, on the other hand, is comparatively an unknown. He is a graduate of M I T and an assistant in the engineering department of the United Shoe Machinery Co., connected with the Beverly office.

For more than five years Tom Mahan, professional at United Shoe, has been expounding Nies who started his competitive career as Mahan's partner in amateur pro matches. For years Mahan has predicted that Johnny Nies would be champion of the old Bay State.

He may have a chance to crow tonight.

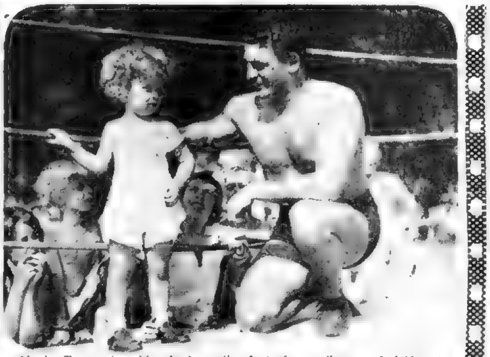
Champion Don Idol to Tots Who Visit Camp



Charley Travers (yes, it's a boy) was the first of a small army of children to greet Ed Don George after the heavyweight wrestling champion finished a fast workout at his Mansion Inn camp. George is getting in top form for his title defense against Jim Londos, next Wednesday evening at Fenway Park. The Don is a favorite with a large group of children, who play around the camp.

MAT REFEREE NAMED SOON

By Jack Conway

Paul Bowser will go into a huddle with Jim Londos and Ed Don George early next week to decide the referee for the world heavyweight championship wrestling bout between these men at Fenway Park on Wednesday night.

Londos and George have informed the promoter they desire the best possible official to have charge of the coming match. All each asks is an even break.

Leon Burbank, Sam Smith, Ted Tonneman, Ralph Dixon, Charley Donnell and George Bothner are among those being considered for this important job.

In view of the fact there will not be any judges, the task of naming the referee is a vital one. The referee will have sole control of the decision.

Londos and George are in splendid condition for the championship battle. Londos has been working before the crowds at The White Spot, Woburn, while George has been thrilling large gatherings by his fine work at his training camp at Mansion Inn, Wayland.

The big fellows will continue hard training through Monday. They will taper off on Tuesday, and then go roaring into action in their title contest Wednesday night.

Tommy Parle, in charge of the sale of tickets at Paul Bowser's downtown office at No. 115 Chauncy street, reports a record advance sale. It is expected that 40,000 persons will see the tussle.

The price scale of $1, $2 and $3 plus the federal tax has made a decided hit with the fans.

The box office at Fenway Park also reports a brisk business.

Ostermueller on Sox Mound in St. Louis

St. Louis, July 14. Scent of the pennant in their nostrils, the Boston Red Sox war horses went out to battle the St. Louis Browns in the second game of the series today.

Wes Ferrell was in the box for the Sox and did a fine job. In addition he poled out two home runs. The Sox in all got 15 hits to nine for the Browns.

Max Bishop, still at second in place of Cissell, also got a home run, while Billy Werber stole his 21st base of the season.

It will be a sort of stagger engagement. There'll be a single test this p. m., a double-header tomorrow and then there'll be a lull until Wednesday when the conclusion will be reached in another twin-bill.

It looked like a clean sweep for the Chicagoans until the seventh when Wally Berger's 20th home run of the season started a four-run rally which gave the Tribe a 7 to 6 verdict.

JORDANS' AND FILENES' TIE FOR GOLF TROPHY

Mr. Boston Says:

Baer Likes Londos to Defeat George

Max vs. Carnera

By Jack Conway

MAX BAER stopped talking about boxing long enough to express [illegible] Jim Londos will defeat Ed Don George in their world [illegible]vyweight championship wrestling bout at Fenway Park [illegible] Wednesday night.

Mr. Boston

"I think Londos has too much on the ball for George," said Baer. "I have seen Jim wrestle in some of his most important tussles, and I think he can lick any man in the world.

"Personally I would rather see George win as we have been friends for several years. I was boxing around Los Angeles when Ed was knocking the West Coast daffy by his wrestling.

"Londos knows every trick in wrestling, and won't be bothered by the big crowd that will attend Wednesday night's bout. I hope I get through my stage appearance at the Metropolitan in time to see the battle."

Rates Carnera First

BAER IS quite certain Primo Carnera would make the best opponent for him [illegible] next year.

"They told the story about Carnera's broken ankle, and of his treatment in the hospital," said Max. "All that will help to build up for a return match.

"I don't think anything was the matter with Primos' ankle. The doctors tell me that if Carnera had received a broken ankle he could not have stood up the way he did. After the bout he walked a quarter of a mile to his dressing room.

"If I meet Carnera again, I shall knock him out in a couple of rounds. In our last bout, I wrecked him with that first right hand punch which landed on the left side of his face just below the eye.

"In the second round, Carnera pulled me to the canvas. He would lock my right arm and drag me to the canvas. I relaxed and permitted myself to go to the canvas with the giant. Otherwise he might have broken my arm.

"I once fought Steve Hamas on the Coast, and if we ever meet again I shall knock him out. I don't think Hamas rates with Carnera as a box office attraction, and I am out to fight the heavyweight who will draw the most money."

Prefers Boxing to Stage

BAER STATED he prefer[illegible] to stage work.

"Four or five shows a day is hard work," said the champion. "I would like to fight three or four more times, and then quit the ring.

"I don't intend to give my money to Wall Street. I shall buy a ranch, and plenty of first-class cattle. You can buy ranches for $7 an acre, and the cattle are tossed in.

"The stories about my way of living have been exaggerated. When I first started boxing, I did some crazy things, but that is all in the past.

"I once bought a car after a fight, hired a chauffeur and a secretary and blew 15 grand in six weeks. I am holding on to my money now."

Talks About Sharkey

BAER WAS [illegible] what he thought about Jack Sharkey.

"Sharkey never liked me," he answered. "When I was a kid 21 year old I was introduced to Sharkey. I wanted to know who Jack Sharkey was, and it got under Jack's skin. I was just kidding.

"Sharkey has got all the money he needs, a fine family, some lovely youngsters and a swell home. He will never have to ask anybody for anything. I hope to be situated the same some day."

I asked Baer if I thought a champion should [illegible].

"I think a fighter does better when he hasn't got anything to worry about but his [illegible]ng work," he replied. "He may be all right if he has a wife who will remain at home, and won't cause him any worries. Otherwise it isn't so good."

A year ago when S[illegible] nipped Wm. [illegible] by a half point to win the M[illegible] Cup skeptics went on the line with the declaration that that was the closest finish the Retail Stores Four Ball League would ever experience.

From a Jordan [illegible] as well as Slattery's viewpoint, Herb K[illegible] was the hero of the [illegible] despite the fact that [illegible] negotiated the difficult [illegible] course in 43-36-79 [illegible] on the 18th hole.

After George S[illegible] Egan had [illegible] with a three-point [illegible] over Edmund O'Connell, Herb Kent and Fred Bradford, who were six down to Dick Ruggles and Paul Hennessey, going out put on a spurt during the inward nine and were [illegible] going to the home hole.

Ruggles canned a putt for a four on the 18th green and looked as though Filene's had made a clean up. Then up stepped Kelly to run in a tough eight footer for a half which divided the inward point and saved [illegible] for Jordan's.

The Filene and Jordan teams will play off for the M[illegible] Cup next Friday at Winchester Country Club.

After the golf matches the players enjoyed a fine dinner at the Tedesco club [illegible] during which P. A. O'C[illegible] president of the E. T. Slattery C[illegible] the Massachusetts director of the NRA and former president of the National Retail Dry Goods Merchants' Association addressed the gathering.

O'Connell declared that due to the failure of his team to finish better than [illegible] he had decided to disband them all in favor of some [illegible].

Jonathan Stone Breaks Leg

Stone [illegible] in the third [illegible] carried from the field. He was a .300 hitter.

Wins Title, Pays Primo Tribute

By MAX BAER

Chapter 23

My Brains Department was so sizzled over Referee Arthur Donovan's act in protecting Primo Carnera in the 10th that the whole lot of them wanted to go out and get machine guns.

"Hey, don't worry," I told them. "I'll get the big darling in the next round, sure. If I can, I'm going to knock him through the ropes and try to drop him in Bill Brown's lap."

But I never had the chance.

I stepped into Primo in the 11th and began blasting away. Soon I saw his legs begin to buckle. His mouth would pop open with each punch. His eyes were beginning to glaze.

I moved in close, ready then to let loose with the final bombardment. But it never was fired. Donovan sensed Carnera's helplessness. He motioned me back—signalled the end of the battle.

My ambition had been realized. I was heavyweight champion of the world. But I couldn't quite realize it until Joe Humphries lifted my arm into the air and Jack Dempsey and Ancil came leaping through the ropes and put on a hugging act.

The trip from the ring to my dressing room comes back now like a nightmare. Ancil, Mike, Dolph Thomas and a detail of police tried to guard me. But no luck. The crowd, I guess a lot of them were those who had hooted me when I was introduced before the fight—jammed the aisles, swirled in, formed a cordon around me, had me off my feet half the time, nearly choked me.

Folks stood on the chairs along the aisle and pounded my scalp raw with their hands, programs, rolled up newspapers—anything that was handy. I'm glad nobody had a baseball bat or a pair of Primo's shoes in hand.

The trip from the ring to the dressing room was an eighth of a mile, perhaps less—but it was at one and the same time the most punishing and delightful I've ever known in my lifetime.

Carnera fought clean and fair and honorably. No man ever lived who showed finer courage or purer grit in the face of a savage beating. He never had a chance after that first round, but he never would concede defeat and my hat is forever doffed to a game warrior.

The only punch he landed in the entire 11 rounds which rattled my teeth was that uppercut in the 8th. I said afterward it didn't effect me. But now I want to admit that I probably was in error.

I had a date with one of the most beautiful blondes I ever saw in my lifetime—I was to meet her right after the fight. But what did I do? I went straight to my hotel room, chatted with my daddy, brother, Ancil, Mrs. Hoffman, Dolph, Mike and some of my pals—and then I went to bed and right to sleep.

I forgot the blonde completely—proving that Primo must have batted me goofy with that one punch.

WAITING OUT THE PITCHER

Batters who swing wildly or are impatient to hit, play into the hands of the pitchers by hitting at bad balls. The main trick of pitching is to keep the ball away from the "fat of the bat," where the hitter can lay against it with a full stride. Pitchers try to make batters hit the ball into the ground or pop it into the air, and so feed them "nibblers" that catch them between stride and and are off the centre of the plate.

A batter who has the pitcher in the hole, with one or two balls and no strikes, is more apt to get the proper ball to hit on the next pitch. Such pitches are called "cripples." Make the pitcher work for you by ignoring bad balls and developing your eye. It will aid fifty to a hundred points to your batting average in the season.

B. Y. C. FLEET CONVERGES ON HULL

By E. B. Schriftgiesser

The good old days of yacht sailing in Hull Bay were vividly recalled today by veteran yachtsmen when the fleet of the Boston Yacht Club began to gather there for the club's annual cruise.

Early prediction of the number of yachts that would take part in this annual event had been so optimistic that we who had seen the pleasure fleets dwindle sadly in recent years were inclined to take them with a grain of salt.

But actually more than 40 yachts will be ready to answer the starting cannon from Commodore Adrian Sawyer's flagship tomorrow morning.

LARGEST IN YEARS

In the official fleet list prepared by Fleet Captain Alex W. (Sandy) Moffat on board the Diesel-electric schooner Mahdee, were a full dozen schooners, 5 yawls, 4 kitches, 8 sloops and 18 power cruisers.

A few invited guests were among the cruising sailors, but most of them were members of the B. Y. C.

The fleet is by far the largest that has gathered under the burgee of the Boston club in many years and speaks well for the enthusiasm of the flag officers and race committee who did the work of preparation.

Flying the commodore's blue-starred flag was the big power cruiser Conquest. Vice-Commodore Francis Chamberlain was aboard his cruiser Polaris, and Rear-Commodore George K. Briggs of Marblehead, aboard the sloop Lizzie M.

THROUGH CANAL MONDAY

Monday the fleet goes through the Cape Cod Canal to Marion. Tuesday they make their way around Hen and Chickens into South Dartmouth to visit the New Bedford Y. C.; the next day they set their course for Newport, and Thursday night the cruise will disband after evening colors at Block Island.

Racing is always secondary on the cruises of the Boston Y. C. contrary to the practice of the Eastern and New York squadrons, whose cruises have degenerated into a series of racing runs.

The club is the oldest in the New England states and held its first cruise in 1867.

Braves Bring Up Shortstop From Harrisburg Farm

Magee Flash Afield but Weak at Bat, Is Report

By Joe Cashman

Bench - warmers played a prominent part in breaking the Braves' losing streak. Randy Moore, idle because of weak hitting, was called on in the seventh and produced a single which knocked in the tying run. A moment later, Billy Urbanski, resting with a bad "charlie horse," came through with a pinch [illegible] single that scored the winning run. Then he finished the game at short.

All six Cubs' runs were scored after two were out, a true sign of class in a ball club.

Wally Berger's 20th circuit drive looked as though it would hit the fence as it left the bat and it wasn't 10 feet above the ground as it shot over the infield. It kept soaring, however, and just cleared the leftfield barrier.

The Braves have brought in a young shortstop named Magee from their Harrisburg farm. He's reported to be a wizard in the field, but not too hot with the stick.

The Cubs are right on the Giants' heels and know it. They chatter constantly and crab loudly over every close decision that goes against them. Manager Charlie Grimm and Umpire Quigley looked like two game-cocks making ready for the kill as they debated one decision, much to the delight of the ladies present.

Guy Bush warms up his pitching mates between innings when Gabby Hartnett is late in getting on his harness. It's strange that a mound ace is allowed to risk breaking a finger this way.

Wes Ferrell holds the major league record for number of home runs by a pitcher in a season. He lived up to his reputation by hitting two over the wall and accounting for four runs as he was leading the Red Sox to their fifth straight victory in the opener at St. Louis. Max Bishop also hit for the circuit.

With Babe Ruth hitting the 700th home run of his carrer, the Yanks regained first place from the Tigers in the second game of their crucial series out in Detroit. Charlie Ruffing did the Tiger taming, beating the classy Tommy Bridges.

The Giants increased their National League lead to two full games over the Cubs, by making it three out of four over the Pirates. An error by "Blondy" Ryan started the Bucs on a four-run rally in the ninth, but they finished one run behind, while "Lefty" O'Doul contributed another round- tripper.

Yanks Regain Top, as Ruth Blasts 700th Homer

Though outhit, 12 to 7, the Senators nosed out the Indians, 3 to 2 and the fourth place Cleveland entry now trails the Red Sox by 3½ games.

Father and Son Day at the Wigwam again this afternoon. All boys 16 years old or younger, accompanied by their fathers, will be admitted to the grandstand on payment of the 10-cent tax.

CHINESE EMPRESS was raced into [illegible] her last start [illegible] With nothing as formidable as the Whitney [illegible] Chinese Empress should [illegible] on top and make every pole of this journey a winning one. STAR PORTER raced [illegible] of a second of the track record in his last start. Although [illegible] had a certain [illegible] of [illegible] him to the second [illegible] SOBIEHA won her last [illegible] weaker [illegible] up a long way [illegible]

FIFTH RACE

Speedmore, Fleam, Roustabout

SPEEDMORE, a noted front runner, has been accorded a favorable impost of 109 pounds in this affair. Thus weighted, the son of Parisian [illegible] 2d, may never be headed. FLEAM, another speedster, has been rightfully assigned top weight of 120 pounds and is strictly the one to beat. Around New York this summer, she easily trimmed the best of her own sex and age and on one occasion handed Barn Swallow, the best of the older mares, a handy drubbing.

ROUSTABOUT placed to Teralice in his last, but is picking up nine pounds off that effort. According to my way of thinking the route of this affair may be a little too short for him.

SIXTH RACE

Old Depot, Adobe, Biff

If OLD DEPOT is going to win a race at this meeting it should occur in this affair. The A. Bartelstein [illegible] turned in a creditable performance in his last to finish third to Star Fire and Flying Cadet. That effort should have put him right on edge for an affair of this kind. ADOBE POST finished third behind Night Jasmine and Vote in his last, and shapes up as the main danger. BIFF will probably be in front as far as he goes, and may hang on long enough to snare the [illegible] award.

SEVENTH RACE

Brown Wisdom, The Heathen, Cold Spill

BROWN WISDOM was made too much use of during the early stages, but he hung on gamely to take the place in back of Calome in his last. THE HEATHEN is razor sharp and must be taken for the place, although the writer cannot ever recall him winning at this distance. COLD SPILL displayed improvement in her last and shapes up next best.

EIGHTH RACE

Out Bound, Erech, Steelhead

OUT BOUND, three-time winner at this course, shapes up as the logical choice in this race despite that he trailed his field last out. Prior to that effort, he had been galloping to this sort. ERECH displayed an even effort behind better ones in his last outing and should prove troublesome in this affair. STEELHEAD should be along in time to save the short end.

Morgan Firm Sends Protest to Reich

By International News Service

New York, July 14.—More than [illegible] financial firms and others who participated in the flotation of the German government's Dawes and Young Loan bonds today were advised by J. P. Morgan & Co. of a cable of protest the firm had sent to the Reich minister of finance [illegible] of German [illegible] default [illegible] the loans.

The Morgan cable, sent on June 29, said in part:

"The bonds of these loans are the highest form of obligation in the power of the German government to give, and the world will not understand nor soon forget if these obligations are dishonored . . .

"For ourselves and those associated with us in the offering of the American branches of the two Reich loans, and on behalf of the thousands of American citizens who are holders of the bonds of these loans, we protest with the utmost possible vigor against any failure on the part of the German government, for any reason whatsoever, to fulfill its obligations in respect to these loans.

"We therefore urge upon the German government, for its own sake and as a matter of good faith to the holders of its obligations, that the declaration . . . (of default) . . . be reconsidered and that steps be taken without delay to assure the continued regular service of the German external loan, 1924, and the German government international 5½ per cent loan of 1930."

NEW IDEAS ARE VIEWED AS UNREAL

Men of Experience Disapprove of the Present Notions

[illegible] We [illegible] to take the farmer [illegible] fool [illegible]

[illegible] the notion that price [illegible] to real value [illegible] will [illegible]

You would think to hear them talk that prices came into the world first and that sometime later on people began to produce things [illegible] and to consume them [illegible]

So they say, "Let us fix a price of $1 on oil, 16 cents on cotton and 9 cents on copper, then what consumers buy is the demand."

But that is putting the cart before the horse, since price, if real, must measure value and value can be known only by allowing supply and demand to work out a balance.

According to the price fixing notion you could fix any price on anything, say $1000 a pound for common dirt. Why not?

All this is [illegible] thinking. It is selecting the results we would like and "passing a law" regardless of causal conditions.

Why is to draw the line between work and leisure, cheap money and bad money, real value and high price? If recent schemes are logical, why not go ahead and stop all work, pay everybody high "wages" by taxation, reduce the dollar to 1 cent, print $100,000,000,000, and fix all prices, say oil at $10 a barrel, and cotton and copper at $1 a pound?

Do you really believe that logic is out of date, that results don't have causes and that legislation can replace the laws of nature?

STOCK PRICES IRREGULAR AT CLOSE

New York, July 14—Renewed selling of the rails turned the stock market into an irregular affair today and apaprently deterred thraders from further ecovery effots which were evident at the close yesterday.

Trading was at a snail's pace right fro mthe opening when the liquidation of the rails became evident. Strength in a few isolated issues such as Union Carbide, Twin City Rapid Transit preferred and several others was the outstanding feature of the session.

The commodity markets failed to provide much stimulus to stocks. Cotton advanced about 25 cents a bale in light trading, while wheat was irregular on profit taking induced by yesterday's sharp rise.

Demand for the sugar stocks continued evident in today's light trading when American sugar advanced nearly a point to a new high for the year. Cuban American and South Porto Rico Sugar also were in fair demand and rallied fractionally.

Selling in the rails again appeared to converge principally on Southern Railway which got down fractionally and almost duplicated its low for the year established yesterday. Chicago & Northwestern, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Haven also ruled lower.

Mixed trend prevailed in the first hour of trading, with trading at a slow pace. Changes were largely limited to a narrow range. Atlantic Coast Line sagged 2 points in the carrier group, while Norfolk & Western showed a gain of 2 points over its last closing price. Louisville & Nashville was down more than a point.

Devoe & Reynolds was better than a point higher. American Rolling Mill advanced a major fraction. Bon Ami dropped 2 points from its previous closing price. Pacific Mills showed strength, adcancing more than a point. American Snuff was a point higher.

Chancellor Hitler's speech, in so far as it directed attention to Germany's economic difficulties, was studied in Wall Street, but it held out little hope for an early restoration of a free movement of trade to and from Germany. The Reich's latest difficulties have forced curtailment of buying of copper and cotton, among other materials.

Business students continued to watch commodities. Disappointmeint was expressed in some quarters over the failure of business to respond readily to recent appreciation in commodity prices. The Moody spot commodity index has risen to a new peak for the year, although it still is under the top established a year ago.

In contrast with farm products, there has been a weakening tendency in steel, scrap, textile and other lines in recent weeks as demand slackened with the approach of the seasonal full.

Agreement by the RFC to underwrite any part of a $50,000,000 issue of five-year notes by th Baltimore & Ohio Railroad promised to bring another large new piece of financing upon the market. It was thought likely to encourage additional railroad financing.

The F. W. Dodge Corp. announced June construction contracts in 37 Eastern states dropped 5 per cent to $127,131,200 but were 24 per cent above June, 1933.

New life insurance production last month showed a gain of 1.9 per cent over the like 1933 month, according to the Association of Life Insurance presidents.

The dollar was steady. The British pound opened unchanged at $5.03⅞. French francs dipped .00¼ of a cent to 6.59½ cents.

JUNE BUILDING CONTRACTS OFF

NEW YORK, July 14.—June construction contacts in 37 Eastern States were seasonally lower dropping 5 per cent from May to $127,131,200, according to F. W. Dodge Corp. They were 24 per cent above the like 1933 month. Contemplater construction of $313,882,300 was about 30 per cent above May though almost $75,000,000 below June, 1933

Public funds financed $78,308,200 of the June building, constituting about 57 per cent of the total against 53 per cent in May and 28 per cent in the like 1933 month.

The cumulative total for the six-months' period this year amounted to $854,320,200 which is almost twice last year's total of $432,113,400 and 28 per cent greater than the 1931 total of $667,079,200 for the corresponding period.

Work privately financed reached $282,487,100 during the first half of this year, against $270,648,600 for the first half of 1933 and $331,904,300 in the first half of 1932. Publicly-financed projects attained a total of $571,833,100 for the first six months of this year, against $161,464,800 a year agao, aad $335,175,400 for the first half of 1932.

DOLLAR STEADY IN LONDON

By Associated Press

London, July 14—The United States dollar closed at 5.03⅞ to the pound today on a quiet market against an overnight rate of 5.03⅞. There was no change from the opening quotation.

The French franc closed at its overnight rate of 76.38 to the pound.

The price of bar gold decreased a half-penny to 138 shillings ($34.77) per fine ounce, at which price £75,000 ($377,787.50) was sold.

Alpha Cemen Co. Loss Is Reduced

New York, July 14—For 12 months ended June 30, 1934, Alpha Portland Cement Co. reports net loss of $282,435 after taxes, depreciation, etc., against net loss of $1,355,797 for 12 months ended June 30, 1933.

Current assets as of June 30, 1934, including $5,695,366 cash and marketable securities, amounted to $8,014,317 and current liabilities were $348,988. This compares with cash and marketable securities of $5,284,580, current assets of $7,720,929 and current liabilities of $283,919 on June 30 a year ago.

Lumber Prices Are Higher at Mills

Washington, July 14—Lumber prices, f. o. b. mill, have increased 14.9 per cent since the NRA lumber code went into effect, while hourly wages earned by sawmill workers have risen 43.8 per cent and per capita weekly earnings of sawmill workers have advanced 15.1 per cent, is shown in figures submitted by the Lumber Code Authority to the National Recovery Administration for use by the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

American Sugar Co. Earnings Larger

New York, July 14—Based on indicated results so far and the present outlook, American Sugar Refining stands a good chance of showing better earnings this year than in any year since 1930.

For 1933 the company reported $4,801,574 net earnings, or $3.67 a share on the 450,000 shares of common after preferred dividend requirements. In 1930 net income was $5,659,946, or $5.57 a share. In 1933, for the first time, the company included in operating results of the Cuban properties centrals Canagua and Jaronu, which during the year showed a loss of $401,937.

With the Costigan-Jones bill enacted into law refiners and producers alike stand in a better position and the act should make for greater stability in a situation where it was badly needed.

Establishment of sales quotas for Cuba, American beet sugar producers and insular possession producer already effective under the act is generally interpreted as likely to result in higher sugar prices for the balance of this year, a factor favorable for the refiners who are usually in a better psition on a rising market.

Aside from the domestic situation American Sugar should benefit substantially from any improvement in the Cuban situation where it has upwards of $25,000,000 invested in raw sugar producing properties, which in the past several years have been operated unprofitably.

Centrals Canagua and Jaronu are conceded to be two of the best operating mills on the island. Generally, Cuban mills can begin to make money with Cuban raws selling from 1¾ to 2 cents. Last sales of Cuban raws were above 1.70 cents, with the sugar trade talking 2-cent sugar in the not distant future.

Supervised Shares, Inc., Assets Off

New York, July 14—Statement of Supervised Shares, Inc., as of June 30, 1934, shows net assets, based on market value of investments were equivalent to $1.24 a share on 6,516,959 shares of capital stock outstanding at close of the period. This compares with net assets equal to $1.26 a share on Dec. 31, 1933, computed on comparable basis.

For quarter ended June 30, 1934, profit was $70,102 after expenses and taxes, but exclusive of $31,532 net profit from sales of securities, which was carried to surplus account.

Investments costing $8,334,745 were carried in balance sheet as of June 30 last, at market value of $8,010,825, an excess of cost over market value of $323,920. Dec. 31, 1933, market value of securities was $152,828 less than cost. Total assets as of June 30, 1934, including $100,434 cash, were $8,203,862.

U. S. & British International Assets

New York, July 14—Report of United States & British International Co., Ltd., for six months ended May 31, 1934, states that net assets based on market quotations or appraisals on the above dte, were equal to 116.79 per cent of the total principal amount of the debentures outstanding, against 100.77 per cent on Nov. 30, 1933. Net assets applicable to the preferred stocks on this basis aggregeated $417,628.

For six months ended May 31, 1934, profit was $14,192 after expenses and taxes, against $2003 in first half of previous fiscal year. Losses on sales of securities during the period not provided for by reserves amounting to $292,008 were charged against surplus, against loss of $571,507 charged against reserves in six months ended May 31, 1933.

Typewriter Business Improves

Reports from Remington-Rand and Underwood-Elliott-Fisher are particularly encouraging, so they indicate that the typewriter and business machine companies not only have had a strong comeback in their volume of business but that earnings available for stockholders are going up sharply, also. On the basis of the two companies' showings, they must be added to the list of industries in which rising costs are not offsetting, to any discouraging extent, increased business volume. The companies have been among the major beneficiaries of the Administration's monetary policy, for their foreign business has advanced sharply with the cut in the value of the dollar.

MacAndrews & Forbes Co. Net

New York, July 14—MacAndrews & Forbes Co. reports for quarter ended June 30, 1934, net profit of $249,988 after all expenses and federal taxes, equal, after dividend requirements on the 6 per cent preferred, to 72 cents a share on the [illegible] shares of $10 par common stock, against $243,672, or 70 cents a share, in the preceding quarter and $223,258, or 64 cents a share, in June quarter of 1933.

For six months ended June 30, last, net profit was $493,660, equal to $1.43 a share on the common, against $351,907, or $1.06 a share in the first half of 1933.

END TO COUPONS ON CIGARETTES

New York, July 14—Because the executive order on the retail tobacco code prohibits selling cigarettes at the minimum price and then granting rebates, the Schulte Retail Stores Corp. on Monday, July 16, will discontinue issuance of coupons with purchases of cigarettes. The minimum price which can be charged is 13 cents, the price prevailing in most Schulte stores and, if coupons were given with cigarettes, it would be necessary to add their value to the price of the cigarettes.

There is no provision as yet regarding coupons with cigars, but it is probable a similar provision will become effective on sigars on Aug. 1, A. D. Schulte, vice-president of the company, says. There is nothing to prevent issuance of coupons with smoking tobacco or other merchandise, Mr. Schulte said.

The value of the merchandise issued in exchange for coupons issued by Schulte is about $500,000 annually, it was stated. Sales of popular brands of cigarettes by Schulte stores run to about 40 per cent of the total business which last year was about $25,000,000, Mr. Schulte said.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Josephthal & Co.—Whether the sharp rise in wheat and cotton has definitely turned the stock market remains to be seen. It is probable that technical conditions were favorable to a rally in stocks anyway, and the dull close, which was off from the best levels, also indicate that the rally was largely technical.

Hornblower & Weeks—Unless the constructive pattern of the market should unexpectedly change from what it has been since early May, we will want to proceed on the theory that the foundation for a sustained and substantial recovery movement is now in process of formation.

E. A. Pierce & Co.—Practically no stimulus was apparently received by stocks from another day of sharply rising commodity prices other than instances directly affected. In more speculative periods of stock market history commodities have frequently had a rather direct bearing on common stock prices.

HUMOR LACKING IN RED DRIVE FOR REVOLT

Present boundaries of states would mean nothing to Communists, who plan a split into Northern and Southern Soviet Republics. Robert Matthews, investigating the spread of Communism in the United States, asserts in the last article of his series that even the youthful "Reds" are preparing for what they think is "The American Red Revolution."

By ROBERT MATTHEWS

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

New York, July 14—The Communist formula in the United States for the winning of the South is—secession and formation of a Soviet union in Dixie, according to plans put forward here.

A leader of the Southern Share-Croppers Union, identified simply as "Comrade M." in his report to Communist Party, U. S. A., has declared that Communists are at work in the South to organize poor whites and negroes. According to Comrade M:

"Our union has forced itself upon the attention of the landlords throughout the South. They are afraid of our union—they know what it means. We were able to force landlords of three plantations to cancel all debts against share-croppers.

"The Communist party will lead the lowly to obtain land, to confiscate land for themselves."

UTTERLY WITHOUT HUMOR

The insistence of the communist that he "will" do this or that—in one sweeping motion, after propaganda has laid the groundwork—is characteristic of the Red movement in the United States, as elsewhere. The movement is utterly without humor: frivolity is frowned upon; a jester is immediately suspected.

The "perfect" comrade of the Communist party was described to me by a leader of the party as—a teetotaler, a non-smoker, an early retirer, never going to movies or light theater; reading heavily of Karl Marx and Lenin, active physically to prepare his body for "The Revolution;" a non-romantic in all senses.

The young Communists, just as their elders, devote their time to "the cause." They attend meetings, demonstrations, strike-picketings; they distribute leaflets, sell Red publications; address meetings and talk Communism and the class conflict. Few are out to better their financial and social status.

SEEK ACTION NOW

Regardless of their ideals and intentions, and the fact that they do not fit in with the prevailing mode of living and government, it would be a mistake to consider the Communists social demagogues and charlatans.

The magic which they work within their own ranks is effective upon masses which have long listened to agitators declaim against the present system of life and living. They are beginning to tire of listening, now, and want action.

This desire for action, according to those who are close to the heart of the secretly spreading Communist movement, is the basis for the confidence of the rank and file of Communists that they will have a Soviet America in from five to ten years.

One Woman Saves Tax for Budget

Litchfield, Conn., July 14—The amendment which gave women the right to vote was hailed here as a life-saver. Taxpayers were asked to attend a special borough meeting to approve a budget and levy a tax. Only one taxpayer—a woman—attended the session. She approved the budget and voted for a four mill tax.

50,000 VISITORS EXPECTED AT YD REVIEW

Fort Devens, July 14—With any kind of favorable weather, about 50,000 persons are expected here tomorrow for the annual YD Day review.

Although the old 26th Division will be minus two field artillery regiments and its air force, the spectacle is expected to be an inspiring one, and sentimental reasons alone will draw a large crowd.

Today the 13 survivors of the 5th Regiment, now known as the 182nd Infantry, will be guests of the latter organization. Edward H. Lincoln, senior vice-commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. is one of the guest group.

In the evening the annual banquet of the alumni association of the training school of the Massachusetts National Guard will be held at 7:30 in the camp banquet hall. Major Patrick O'Brien, formerly of the 182nd, and James Mullen, Charlestown court clerk, will be speakers.

The "grads" will assemble at the division headquarters grandstand at 6:30 p. m., and will parade by classes to the banquet hall. Each class will have its own marshals. The 101st Engineers will lead off the parade.

Special guests for the dinner include Brigadier General John A Agnew, Lieutenant Colonel Porter B. Chase, Brigadier General Edmund Slate, Colonel Oscar Dudley, General Daniel Needham, Major William L. Ross, Major Samuel Murray, Lieutenant Colonel Lawrence Carew and Major Vincent P. Coyne.

General Agnew was honored yesterday when the troops passed in review for him on Edmund's Field.

JAIL-BREAKER IS ARRESTED IN WEST

The long and well-known arm of the law reached out to California today and clutched Edward M Birmingham, 19, whose escape from Salem jail two months ago brought death to an inmate by the wild shot of a jailer.

Birmingham was captured at Los Angeles after Police Chief Daniel A. McEachern of Beverly telegraphed police information he had received on a tip. According to despatches from the coast, Birmingham admitted his identity and waived extradition. Police are holding until the arrival of jail authorities to return him to Salem.

Daniel J. O'Leary, 34, of Lynn was the inmate who died because of Birmingham's dash for liberty last May 16. O'Leary was felled by a shot from the revolver of Guard Bernard J. Bancroft. Bancroft was later exonerated after an investigation by Sheriff Frank Raymond. Birmingham's home is in Guild road, Beverly. He was awaiting grand jury action on charges of breaking and entering.

HARVARD NAMES 5 TO FOUNDING FETE GROUP

Plans for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Harvard College have started with the selection of five men to comprise the Citizen's Harvard Tercentenary committee.

Selection of the five men is announced by Mayor Mansfield of Boston and Mayor Russell of Cambridge.

Former Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams and Eliot Wadsworth of the Boston Chamber of Commerce were named by Mayor Mansfield. Mayor Russell selected Walter F. Earle, Stoughton Bell, and Cecil E. Fraser.

Jerome D. Greene, director of the Harvard Tercentenary committee, who arrived in Cambridge recently, was pleased over the appointment of a citizen's committee.

He declared that the appointment of such a committee by the two executives gives practical effect to the assurance given by the executives to President Conant that the cities they represent will be glad to co-operate with the university in every way possible in planning for the great celebration to commemorate the 300th anniversary, in the summer and autumn of 1936.

Jack Oakie Pays $100 Auto Fine

San Bernardino, Cal., July 14—An indignant, red-faced young man, who finally convinced officers he was Jack Oakie, film comedian, was arrested here and charged with reckless driving and intoxication. He was finally released after paying a $100 fine in police court.

According to the arresting officer, the driver was overtaken as his automobile zig-zagged along the highway leading from Big Bear Mountain resort.

All Envious of Roosevelt

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Right now we would like to be on a slow boat to Egypt, and come back to find all the strikes over.

Did you notice that General Johnson doesn't want to choose up sides with Senator Borah? The General said, "Why that man busted up the League of Nations and wasn't even charged with a time at bat."

Nobody is wise to pick bones with Senator Borah. When he is right he will give you both sides of the argument and depend entirely on his gestures.

Peaceful Waters Fine

Come on In, Europe! It's Never Too Late to Learn to Swim
(See Cartoon on Right!)

IF you think you're having a hard time with the heat and humidity, think of poor Old Lady Europe who has the silliest ideas of how to keep cool and comfortable.

Poor Europe!

Lucky Uncle Sam!

Both are having heat waves. But these Europeans are the funniest folks when it comes to heat.

Instead of getting themselves down to our near-nudist basis, they load their backs with chain-mail, armor plate and lots of heat-making and heat-keeping junk.

When they think they hear a roar, they perspiringly await the dreaded lions of conflict, instead of fancying themselves near the pleasant roar of the surf on a white expanse of beach.

Of course, Uncle Sam should have his emergency metal-suit ready—his adequate preparation for every and all military emergency, in good shape, in no danger of rust or neglect.

Of course, he should keep an eye open for clouds which promise trouble, and an ear cocked for sounds of strife which may endanger him.

But there's a time and a place for everything. A sensible sense of proportion allows us Americans to take time off for cooling when our worst immediate enemies are heat and humidity. We offer such a sense of proportion to the Europeans as a free hot weather hint.

Instead of listening to war-scare propaganda dished out by European journalists with high temperature and excessive blood pressure, Old Lady Europe ought to get a load of the excellent advice given by T. E. Powers in the cool and refreshing cartoon on this page.

Come on in, Europe, the peaceful waters are fine. Even at your age, you can learn to swim, if you get rid of that griddle you're wearing.

Combating the Bootlegger

Washington reports that reductions in Federal liquor taxes, as a means of controlling the bootlegger, will be undertaken by the Administration.

The Federal imposts fall into two categories—tariffs on imports, which the President may increase or decrease fifty per cent; and domestic taxes, which only Congress can change.

In addition to the direct Federal taxes, it is pointed out, there are innumerable other taxes, including those levied by States, which when pyramided represent about half the retail cost of alcoholic beverages, and which give the bootlegger his advantage, since he pays no taxes at all.

Obviously it is both necessary and desirable to stop bootlegging.

On the other hand, the legitimate American industries must not be sacrificed to foreign producers.

However, the problem ought not to be difficult.

In the case of California wines the tariff barrier should be maintained so that the excellent native articles may command their own home market, while reductions of Federal and State internal taxes serve to reduce the retail price.

It ought to be easy to devise tariff schedules which would assure adequate supplies of pure goods, while using the internal low-tax weapon to divert patronage from the law-breaker to the licensed dealer.

Don'ts for Water Safety

Every day thousands of children go gaily to seashore, lakes and rivers. Nearly every evening some family bemoans the loss of a loved one.

Two-thirds of the year's drownings are crowded into these summer weeks. Monday death lists number as many adults as children.

Captain Jack Wallace of the Red Cross has supplied this list of "Don'ts" for young and old on request of the Boston Evening American:

DON'T swim where there is no life guard.

DON'T swim when heated. Cool off first.

DON'T go swimming until two hours after eating.

DON'T push anybody into the water or play other tricks.

Children should be encouraged to take swimming lessons. And life-saving lessons, as well.

Parents should read these DON'T to their children. By so doing, they may help avert a summer tragedy.

West Goes Eastern

Colonel Fred Cardway, former Texas Ranger and now a Deputy Sheriff of Maricopa County, Arizona, is touring the East with a grievance.

What remains of the old West is bent on losing itself. But, says the Colonel:

> "My notion is that the old West and its traditions should be preserved.
>
> "I have been urging many organizations in Arizona to preserve the State's traditions and trying my best to get the men out there in the open places to wear the ten-gallon hats of the old West.
>

And even while here, he will not want for Western companionship. Not liking the saddle horses to be hired here, he is having his bronco, Pancho Villa, shipped East.

No Parking Charge

Salisbury Beach is to have an additional parking place, built with public funds. And the proposition is made that a fee be charged autoists for its use.

No charge is made in the Commonwealth's parking spaces at Wollaston, Revere, Nantasket and other beach resorts.

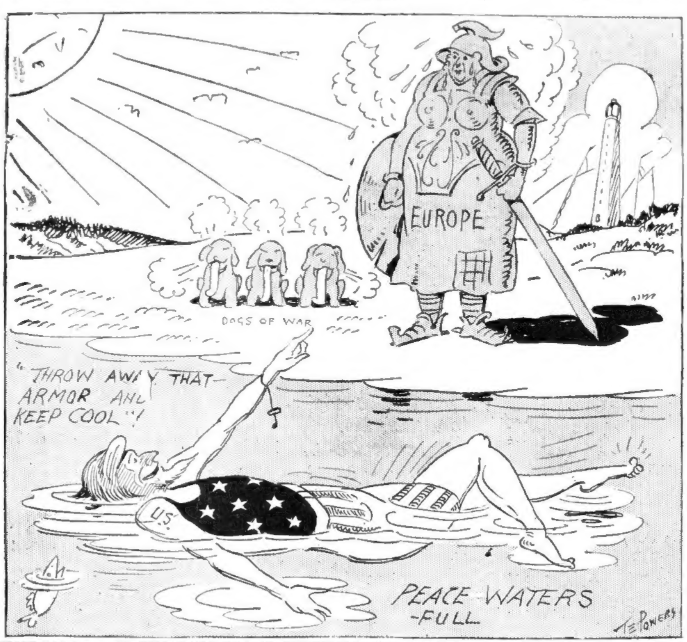
Advice to the War Worn-- Shed and Cool Off! -:- By T. E. Powers



21 in This Family -:- By Winifred Black

There are only 15 children at home now, so the going is pretty good for the Latour family of Chicago.

Winifred Black

They went through the gates at the World's Fair the other day, 21 of them in all, but four of them are married and just came with the family for the day.

"Nineteen children to bring up and the depression just whanging along like a circus band," Father Latour said to a newspaper reporter.

"Oh, that wasn't so bad; you see, we have a little strip of ground at the back of the house; we live out in the suburbs and we raise all our own vegetables and we sell quite a few, too—that gives us our fresh meat.

"We raise just pigs enough to keep us in pork and sausage and spare ribs and ham and bacon.

"That's easy when you have a cow for the milk; pigs thrive on sour milk, and then, of course, we have a lot of not so good vegetables to throw into the pen, too.

"And mother, she cans the beans and the corn and the tomatoes, yes, and the green peppers, too, that's for sauce for the spaghetti, you understand, and we dig a little cellar and there we keep our potatoes and onions and carrots, la la—"

And there was a world of gay friendliness in the eyes of the father of the family when he thought of the spaghetti and the good spare ribs and all.

Mrs. Latour, do you think she spends her time playing bridge or going window shopping?

Well, not exactly.

She buys a length of cloth at a bargain, and makes it up in o dresses for her brood. The boys' clothes she makes the same way, no, they are not fashion plates, but they are well and comfortably covered.

Now if they lived in France, Papa Latour and two of the big brothers could make the family shoes of wood and that would be that.

But in this so proud America, wooden shoes—ah, they would never do even if they were filled with straw and were ever so comfortable.

Somehow I'm awfully interested in the Latours.

Nineteen children in the family and not a thought of going on the relief, and papa and the two older brothers making something like $25 a week between them, and they're happy and healthy and you ought to hear them laugh at the very idea of being mad because someone else has more money than they.

I suppose it's very foolish, but somehow I could find it in my heart to envy people like that.

I wonder when we will take a lesson from them, we worried, anxious, nervous, discontented, restless Americans.

We've tried the "big money" way of things for a while now and it doesn't seem to be such a shining success after all.

How about getting hold of a few acres, having our own garden, raising a few chickens and a few vegetables, and oh, yes, old Mr. and Mrs. Porker—why they're the mainstay of the family and think of that cellar full of vegetables? But I would want my place to be somewhere in the real country, where I could have a stream and make a little spring house.

Were you ever in a spring house, gentle reader?

A clear, bubbling spring in the middle of the little room, shelves, and pans of milk and cream, and rolls of butter, and big jars of ice cold buttermilk? Just grab a fresh loaf of new baked bread off the kitchen table, come on, let's go down to the spring house and have some bread and butter and a glass of buttermilk, and maybe for a great treat a little honey on the bread.

Oh, yes, we're going to keep bees when we have a spring house, and we're going to raise popcorn—that's for the winter evenings. And be sure to cut plenty of good firewood from the wood lots the next time you're down there and let's put the hickory nuts and the butternuts on the roof to dry in the sun, shall we?

Hurrah! I wish I didn't have to wake up and run down to the delicatessen for some ready-made food, and hunt up the money for the landlord and look over the gas bill and try to think what on earth to wear to Molly's party. I don't like Molly and Molly doesn't like me, and Molly's parties bore me to tears, but I must go or be considered a dead one.

Too bad, isn't it?

Human Side of the News -:- By Edwin C. Hill

The O. G. P. U., Soviet Russia's secret police, once called "Cheka," a blood relative of the Okrana of Czarist days, has been stripped of its summary powers, renamed the commissariat of internal affairs and placed under the authority of the regular courts, so we are told.

But it will take more than a cablegram from Moscow to convince the world that Stalin's guard, the rock-bottom foundation of his dictatorship and of the whole Communist regime, has been pushed into the background of the Russian picture.

No. 2 Lubianka street in Moscow has oeen the real powerhouse of the Soviet masters, a secret and sinister center of ruthless autocracy. About it cling terrible traditions.

Lubianka Street is deserted at night. It is a place accursed. It is the site of the most dreaded prison in the wide world. It is the one spot which makes even Devil's Island seem a paradise.

Even in the sunlight the people of Moscow give it a wide berth. So there are none to look on or even heed when a stir of activity in the grim silence of No. 2 Lubianka Street.

Staccato explosions from powerful motors. The rhythmical tread of marching men. Low voiced commands, in purring, spitting Russian. From darkness of the terrible walls of Lubianka Prison, motor lorries roll into the dimly-lighted street.

Behind the lorries a file of strapping young soldiers marching with the machine-like precision of Prussian Infantry. The rumble of wheels and the tramp-tramp of hobnailed boots upon the cobblestones gradually die away and fade into the inky silence of the night.

Lubianka is as quiet as death itself, and the wail of the wind which sweeps the street is the wail of the tens of thousands of ghosts that haunt the place where their souls were torn from their mortal shells. The hours pass.

The workingmen's clubs and the theaters empty their audiences into the streets of the Soviet capital. In Red square, by the Kremlin Lenin sleeps alone in his monstrous mausoleum.

But in the dead of the early morning Lubianka resounds again to marching feet. The armed men are returning, and the cobblestones again echo the hollow rumbling of wheels and the rhythmical shuffle of disciplined soldiers. There is no parallel on earth for this organization, the Soviet Secret Police.

Officially, it is the Department of Political Administration. In the vernacular it is the Gay-Payoo, Russian slang for the initials of the department, O-Gay-Pay-Oo. Day and night its minions sallied from the prison like evil birds of prey to hunt down their victims.

Then, as now, a mere suspicion was sufficient to provoke an order of arrest. Then, as now, the spies of the secret police were everywhere—in the shops and factories, in the hotels and restaurants, even in the homes, for no man and no woman could know who was in the pay of the secret police, eager for a chance to twist a jest into a disloyal utterance, eager to betray them to death for a few miserable roubles.

Their businees was and is, to entice people into saying or doing imprudent things, anything sufficient for a cause of arrest. Counter-revolutionists, conservatives, Socialists, nobles, petty criminals, rich merchants, bishops, priests, princes, young girls and beardless boys were dragged in endless and sorrowful procession through the portals of Number Two Lubanka, never to emerge again.

Then, as now, a savage warfare was waged by the Gay-Payoo against God and his Son, against the only thing really precious that is possessed by humanity, religious faith.

According to official Communist statistics, 30 bishops and 1414 priests were executed in 1919, but more reliable figures place the number as 8000, 100 persons in the Orthodox Church alone—prelates, monks, nuns, clerks and church servants.

Nobody will ever know how many victims were dragged to shame and torture and appalling death by the secret agents, whether they operated under the old name, "Cheka," or under their present designation O-Gay-Pay-Oo.

It was Felix Dzershinsky who explained, gently stroking his drooping mustache, his pale blue eyes glowing with fanaticism, that the function of the secret police was neither to judge nor to pardon.

It's sole duty, as he put it, was "to incinerate our enemies" . . . . That was the cue: "our enemies" . . . . Any of the thousands of Communists high in power in the Soviet who wished to satisfy a personal hatred or a grudge, put upon the lists of the secret police the names of the people he wanted out of the world.

Charles R. Crane, formerly United States Minister to China, certainly a conservative person, not given to exaggerated statements or wild charges, has solemnly averred that two million persons were the victims of the Cheka under the bloody rule of the madman, Dzershinsky.

Strange as it may seem, and as it may apepar from this crimson record, the Gay-Payoo is anything but an aggregation of brutal ignoramuses with nothing but an unquenchable thirst for blood. On the contrary, its officers are cold-blooded intellectuals, chosen for mental and physical abilities.

Picked men. Its uniformed force is compossed of the fittest individuals, mentally and physically, that can be found in the whole Red Army. They are intelligent, well-trained thoroughly disciplined, well-mannered, and miracles, for Russia, well-dressed.

Nothing is too good for the Gay-Payoo. Theirs is the finest food, the most luxurious club in Moscow, and the best homes and schools for their children.

The iron regulations that apply to the civilians are not for these autocrats of life and death. All powerful and all-seeing, the Gay-Payoo censors the mails, the telegraphs and cables and telephones, invades private homes and violates even the foreign embassies.

It goes into foreign lands to lay hands on recreant brethren and drag them back to their doom in Lubianka street. There is no list of its agents. No human being, outside of the Gay-Payoo organization has ever been present at a questioning of its victims.

Stars and Stripes

In Texas the standard of a lady has been defined. She's a woman who doesn't chew tobacco in public or shoot anybody but her husband.

THE NIGHT CLUB GIRL

Little Bo Peep,
She lost her sleep,
A gay time was what
And she knew where to find it.

And a tight-wad is just a relic of buy-gone days.

Loyalty and Freedom Are Supported by Legion

By Edward A. Hayes

National Commander of The American Legion
Excerpts From an Address Delivered at Roanoke, Va.

Our Legion believes in and supports our constitutional form of government and upholds the hands of constituted authority everywhere. It believes in a free press and in free speech, but it will remain on guard to see that the liberty is not abused and that it does not become license to destroy our government itself. . . .

The substance of good government is good citizenship, and to make of our American Government a fulfillment of the ideals of the founders we must realize its moral exactions.

DEFEND CONSTITUTION

And we can be equally positive in the sentiment that America is no place for a morally calloused, mentally sluggish people which would allow its privileges and powers to be delegated to, or usurped by, a group who draw their inspiration and ideals from sources subversive to our government.

The responsibility is ours to maintain and defend the constitution and to see to it that it is not made a joke or a mere scrap of paper. . . .

We of the American Legion believe that it is time that the American people take a decided stand against some of the strange tenets that are finding foothold and like a disease are spreading to destroy the principles of freedom and democracy upon which our nation was founded.

The movement is spreading into our schools and colleges, into our churches and social organizations, even into official government circles, as shown by recent startling events.

* * *

Will it not make you think when I tell you on a recent trip to California I found the California department of the American Legion in the throes of difficulty with an admitted set of Communists within one of the beautiful valleys of that state?

A few days later I found, in the State of Texas, the students of the Texas Christian University in a quarrel with the Legion because a student leader at the head of one of these international relations clubs had been advocating that under no condition would they submit to the edicts of the War Department in the event of another national emergency.

PEACE PROPAGANDA

Some of us are familiar with the propaganda of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and the objective of trying to get America entangled in the League Court, with the further motive of cancellation of the war debts. It all interlocks beautifully.

Then we found another phase of this destructive menace in the University of Ohio.

The Legion there discovered a concerted effort on the part of a number of ministers of the community to prepare the ground so that when some young fellows, who evidently entered the university for that purpose, rebelled against military training public opinion would be in favor of them and they would be supported in their refusal.

* * *

Is any youth of today deserving of a special privilege that was not accorded the youth who was drafted in the World War and whose body today lies in consecrated ground?

Is there any difference in the principles of the profiteer who gained from the sacrifices of our defenders and of the youth of today who dodges a moral obligation to the federal government for his own benefit?

We find in too many instances organizations of young men in our schools and colleges taking an oath not to bear arms in a national emergency.

In the great Columbia University in New York city not many weeks ago several hundred students adopted a resolution in which they said that under no conditions would they comply with the edict of the War Department in the event of another war.

It astounds me.

It makes me realize all the more why our citizenry should be exercising its intelligence to support rather than to undermine the old-fashioned patriotism which we call Americanism.

* * *

Each and every citizen of the United States who enjoys the opportunity and protection afforded him by our American government and institutions, if he is honest, will be willing to share the flag that makes those things possible.

The American Legion says that it is not the duty of any one group to carry that burden alone, but it is the duty of all.

"Creative" Evolution

Several years ago Bergson, the French philosopher, expressed the idea that evolution is a continuous process, going on within us and around us very day.

Other minds have asserted the proposition that man, by his devices of civilization, may consciously influence and perhaps control the future evolution, not only of the tamed beasts but even of himself.

He finds that, by partly eliminating the diseases of childhood, Europeans have increased their stature in seventy years by an average of two inches, while Americans have gained two and one-half to three inches in height.

Future advances in medical science will bring forth still taller people, Dr. Boaz thinks, although he considers that nature will impose a limit and races of human giants will be impossible.

Not only are our years upon the earth being made longer by science, but with increased longevity comes also an increasing fitness for the business of living.

These Not 'Dog Days'

It is evident that these are NOT "dog days." The faithful canine is getting a rough deal. Many towns and cities have ordered killing of all unlicensed dogs, with Arlington the latest to issue such an order.

Most welfare boards insist on the family's getting rid of the dog or dogs before paying the dole. This is due, of course, to the fact that dogs must have food.

Maybe we could get up a "Take a Dog" Week.

Under a good new law, which has just gone into effect in Massachusetts, the dog gets one "break." No longer, because unlicensed, can he be treated on the spot like a victim of Hitler.

The new statute provides he cannot be killed until impounded for six days, awaiting appearance of his owner.

Old Boston Charity

A charity that began at home, right here in Boston, away back in 1796, is issuing its annual appeal for funds through R. Minturn Sedgwick, its finance committee head.

> "The Boston Dispensary provides medical care through its clinics, diagnostic hospital, and doctors' service in the homes only for those too poor to provide it for themselves.
> "Last year, these people made 38,000 more visits to morning clinics, and received 24,000 more doctors' calls in their homes than in the year 1925—a normal year," Mr. Sedgwick tells us.

We hope the demands of this charity for 1934 will not long remain undersubscribed.
